WILL DEVELOP HARDING PLAN

Coolidge Takes Up Merchant Marine Problem.

WANTS AN ADEQUATE FLEET

Committee to Be Named to Pass Upon the Feasibility of Pending Proposals—President Sees No Necessity For Change in Government's Policy of Nonintervention in Disputes of Europe.

Washington, Aug. 22.—President Coolidge set as one of the first major tasks of his administration the working out of a solution of the American merchant marine problem.

He made it plain that he shares the same determination, inherited from President Harding, that the nation's merchant fleet shall be adequate to its needs of commerce in peace and as an auxiliary to the navy in time of possible war.

The plan under consideration differs only slightly from that conceived during the regime of Albert D. Lasker as chairman of the shipping board and approved by the late president, after the senate had killed the subsidy bill. It is proposed to take the government's ships out of the hands of private operators, who have been enjoying guaranteed commissions regardless of profit or loss to the government, and place them in charge of corporations formed by the government. These subsidiary corporations would be under the direct management of salaried officers, who, in turn, would be under the supervision of the shipping board. The shipping board, under the proposed plan, would act as the parent or holding concern.

The president's ideas for perfecting the system embody the first step in his announced desire to develop a sympathetic and co-operative working agreement between the executive department of the government and the two houses of congress.

It is proposed to form a committee, consisting of the chairman of the shipping board, the attorney general, secretaries of the treasury and commerce, chairmen of the senate commerce committee and house merchant marine committee, which have jurisdiction over shipping legislation and others, to pass on the feasibility of the pending proposals.

President Coolidge is convinced that the United States has followed a wise policy in avoiding entanglement in the controversies of Europe, it was learned authoritatively at the White House. Reports made to the president by cabinet officers and senators returning from abroad are interpreted as confirming the wisdom of that policy.

Nothing has been revealed, Mr. Coolidge feels, that points toward any necessity for change in the policy of nonintervention which has been followed by the American government. Those who have visited Europe, in the president's opinion, have returned with a more acute realization of conditions there. Impressed by the bitterness and hatreds of the old world, they see all the more plainly that there is nothing for the American government to do at this time except to follow the course already mapped out.

SUBMARINE FOUNDERS

Eighty-four Japanese Drowned When Vessel Fills With Water.

Tokyo, Aug. 22.—Eighty-five Japanese were drowned when a submarine of the "seventy type" filled with water and went down at the Kawasaki dock yards, near Kobe. The submarine, which was just completed, was on a trial trip and carried 40 seamen, two officers and 48 workmen from the dockyards. It first disappeared at 9 o'clock, but reappeared. At 2 o'clock rough seas made it impossible to save the craft and it disappeared again beneath the waters. Five men, including the captain, were saved.

Indianapolis, Aug. 22.—All they had to do at Sam Meko's "filling station" was to "drive in and fill up." However, the explosive fuel purveyed by Mr. Meko is not gasoline at all. Police say it is real "100 proof." Police who raided Sam's soft drink parlor say the contraption they found was the height of efficiency. So efficient that they have turned it over to federal authorities for careful examination. It consisted of an underground tank with an air pump attached. When air was forced in the liquor siphoned forth at a handy spot.

8,000,000 TO THE DOLLAR

Collapse of Mark a Blow to the New German Government.

Berlin, Aug. 22.—The collapse of the mark in New York was an unexpected blow for the government. The reichsbank intervened in the market strongly and held the dollar rate to 5,500,000 marks, but the rate reached 8,000,000 to the dollar after the exchange closed.

The cabinet will issue an ordinance requiring exporters to make affidavit as to the amount of foreign currencies in their possession, and they will be required to sell a stated percentage of these to the government for paper marks at the official rate, the proceeds to be usable for buying food. The shortage in all fats is more acute. Thousands of families are unable to pay the new gas rates and work in many industrial sections has been curtailed by the stoppage of electrical and gas works.

Search For Baby McKenzie.

New York, Aug. 22.—The search for Baby McKenzie has taken on a nation-wide scope. Wireless descriptions and circulars were sent out to thousands of points in the United States and Canada. The mother of the baby is recovering from a hysterical collapse when the reports of more than 160 detectives searching for the lost child gave no hope of its immediate return. Peter McKenzie went back and forth between his home and the police station seeking eagerly for the faintest hope for his little girl's return.

FRENCH ATTITUDE UNYIELDING

Premier Poincare Replies to Recent British Note.

BALDWIN PROPOSAL REJECTED

French Maintain That Invasion of the Ruhr Is Not the Cause of Germany's Financial Plight—Plan For International Commission Not Accepted—No Progress Made Toward Settlement.

Paris, Aug. 22.—The French reparations note, according to a most reliable diplomatic source, though courteous in tone, does not reveal that any appreciable progress has been made toward a settlement of pending disputes or problems.

Premier Poincare maintains that the invasion of the Ruhr is not the cause of Germany's financial plight, which, he insists, is occasioned by Germany's determination not to pay. He rejects the plan for an international commission to inquire into Germany's capacity to pay, and refuses to enter into any negotiations with Germany until passive resistance ceases in the Ruhr. He declares France will not evacuate the Ruhr until the last gold mark is paid on the reparations account. He concludes by saying that the debts of France to America and Britain are in a "different category, both from the point of view of justice and morality," from those of Germany, and can not be paid until Germany reimburses France.

Whether the British government will decide to reply separately to Germany is not known to Paris, but precautions have been taken here to be ready for the calling of an extra session of the chamber of deputies and the senate should Prime Minister Baldwin decide upon such a step. It was stated in the best informed quarters that it is Poincare's intention to lay the entire situation before parliament and to ask its approval of a series of new measures, the first whereof would be the occupation of Frankfurt, should the British take separate action.

Backed by parliamentary approval the French government then would declare the British action tantamount to a repudiation of the treaty of Versailles, which would leave France free to solve by its own means both the problems of reparations and security from future invasion from the east.

M'ADOO AT ISSUE WITH HENRY FORD

Declares There's No Truth in Motor Magnate's Charge.

Los Angeles, Aug. 22.—"Not a word of truth in it," is the way William G. McAdoo here replied to Henry Ford's recent charge that, as executive head of the rail transportation system of the country during the war, McAdoo fell under the influence of "the exploiters, who didn't want efficiency."

McAdoo's denial is in the form of a letter to Frank J. Taylor of Washington, and given out here, and the letter itself is a sequel to a recent interview with the Detroit manufacturer and published in the Christian Science Monitor of July 23.

As quoted in the interview, Mr. Ford said: "When the government took over the railroads and put Mr. McAdoo at the head of them, I happened to be in Washington. Mr. McAdoo told me something of the situation of the railroads and asked me to tell him what I would do about getting the engines and cars repaired and in running order. I and my men had worked out a little plan for shoving the locomotives along and getting them in running order as quickly as possible. Mr. McAdoo was interested and asked me to work out the details of the plan and to bring them to him the next time I was in Washington. I set my men to work and brought the plan back the next week. But Mr. McAdoo would not see me. The exploiters had got him in the meantime. They called him off. They didn't want efficiency."

To all of which Mr. Adoo has this to say: "There is not a word of truth in the Ford statement as far as I am concerned. It is pure imagination."

DR. ABRAHAM SIMON

President of Central Conference of American Rabbis.

I telegraphed Mr. Ford July 25 asking him to kindly tell me the time when and the place where he claims he talked to me about repairing engines and cars. But I can not get a word out of him."

Firpo to Fight Willis.

New York, Aug. 22.—Luis Angel Firpo signed a contract with Tex Rickard to fight Harry Willis in Buenos Ayres next April, regardless of whether Firpo wins or loses in his bout with Jack Dempsey at the Polo grounds here, Sept. 14.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Police Chief Apologizes.

Springfield, O., Aug. 22.—Chief of Police R. E. O'Brien has apologized to Springfield patriotic organizations as a result of the American flag and bibles having been taken into the jail several weeks ago when 72 klansmen were placed under arrest. The patriotic organizations announced through Edward James, chairman, and S. R. Nallie of the disabled war veterans, that the apology would be accepted.

Insurance Plan Abandoned.

Cleveland, Aug. 22.—Abandonment of an insurance branch, established 20 years ago, has been approved by the Foresters of America at a session of the organization's national convention here. The convention voted to eliminate the insurance department, but will pay up, at face value, all outstanding policies upon the death of the policy holders. No premiums will be paid after 1923.

Minister Accused.

Dayton, O., Aug. 22.—Marshal W. E. Graham of Franklin, O., is reported to have asked authorities in California to arrest Rev. F. W. Gordon, pastor, formerly of Franklin. Gordon is alleged to have left Franklin suddenly, owing banks and business houses $8,000. He is said to have been seen in southern California.

Girl Mayor Quits.

Fairport, O., Aug. 22.—Amy Kankonen, girl mayor of this village, has cleared up official business and is ready to depart Friday for Seattle, Wash., where she has accepted a position. Frank Harris, president of the council, has taken over the office.

Motorist Killed.

Springfield, O., Aug. 22.—Charles A. Murphy, 22, of Springfield, was killed when the auto in which he and three other men were riding skidded at a sharp turn near here and tumbled. The three others received minor injuries.

Woman Dies of Burns.

Cleveland, Aug. 22.—Mrs. Helen Ciesak, 32, mother of five small children, died in St. Alexis' hospital from burns sustained when her clothing became ignited as she was lighting a hot water tank in her home here.

Whisky Stored Under Name of Soap. Cincinnati, Aug. 22.—Twenty-year-old whisky, worth $25,000, stored under the name of "soap," was confiscated at the old Anheuser-Busch warehouse here. The "soap" filled 760 gallon cans.

Put Up to Voter.

Springfield, O., Aug. 22.—County commissioners decided to place the proposal for a new $350,000 tuberculosis hospital before the voters this fall.

Newspaper Sold.

Springfield, O., Aug. 22.—The Mechanicsburg News-Item, a weekly paper published by Ora Shaw for the past 25 years, has been sold to E. J. Newell of Jackson, O.

MINERS DENIED WAGE INCREASE

Lewis Sees Strike Unless the Operators Yield.

CONFERENCE AGAIN BREAKS UP

Further Intervention by the Government Believed Necessary if Suspension Is to Be Averted in the Anthracite Field—Next Forty-eight Hours Expected to Bring the Situation to a Head.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 22.—Further intervention by the United States government is necessary if the country is to be spared the hardship of a strike in the anthracite coal fields Sept. 1.

For the second time within less than a month the anthracite wage conference broke up, splitting on the refusal of the operators to grant an increase in pay to the miners. John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, declared that unless the operators recede from their position the men in the anthracite field would quit mining coal Aug. 31.

The break came with a suddenness that surprised all observers and literally stunned the operators, who sought vainly to hold the machinery of negotiations intact at least until word could be had from Washington.

Samuel D. Warriner, head of the operators' general policy committee, told the miners that they would not receive wage increases above the present scale, which he offered to renew until April 1, 1925. W. J. Richards, speaking for the operators, moved that a report of the present status be made to the United States coal commission and that the conference adjourn to meet again later. The miners voted solidly against the motion. After a long parley Mr. Richards finally moved that the conference adjourn "to the call of the secretary" at the request of either side, and this motion was adopted.

This action leaves the negotiations in the same parliamentary status as that of July 27, when the first break came on the check-off and when the intervention of the coal commission was necessary to bring the operators and miners back together.

If it appears inevitable that a suspension must come the government is prepared to meet the situation by diverting sufficient quantities of bituminous coal and coke suitable for anthracite substitutes into the anthracite consuming territory to prevent suffering and to take other measures to safeguard the welfare of the people. The next 48 hours is expected to bring the situation to a head.

"The mine workers are not making any requests of the coal commission," Lewis said. "We are not pleading with the coal commission or any other agency to assist us in defeating the anthracite operators in any contest."

COOLIDGE AWAITS REPORT

Coal Commission to Fix Responsibility For the Break.

Washington, Aug. 22.—President Coolidge will await a report from the United States coal commission fixing responsibility for the breaking up of the anthracite joint wage conference at Atlantic City before disclosing his course of action. This was indicated at the white house following the executive's second conference with Chairman John Hays Hammond of the commission since the Atlantic City conference adjourned. The filing of the report, Chairman Hammond stated, would be the commission's next move. It will be in the president's hands in a day or two. The operators' and miners' committees in the meantime will have an opportunity to resume their negotiations voluntarily, if they see fit to do so. The commission, however, has no intention of asking them to meet again, Chairman Hammond said.

NEWS BRIEFS

Colonel William S. Scott of the quartermaster corps of the United States army, stationed at Omaha, Neb., with the Seventh corps area, died suddenly at Omaha.

Two persons were killed and two seriously injured when the Pittsburgh flyer crashed into a light coupe at a crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad at Dunkirk, N. Y. The dead: Herbert Roloff, 21, Fredonia; Miss Martha Rostkowski, 17, Dunkirk.

Firemen Raymond Farrell and James Sullivan killed and two score persons injured in a fire that destroyed old M. M. hall, Brooklyn.

FOR PRISONERS

Correspondence Schools to Be Established in Forty-five States.

Columbus, Aug. 22.—Plans for the establishment of intra-wall correspondence schools in every state and federal prison in the United States have just been completed by Napoleon Hill, editor of the Napoleon Hill Golden Rule magazine, and Chaplain T. O. Reed of the Ohio state penitentiary, and organization work relative to the establishment of this educational program of gigantic scope is to be begun immediately. Headquarters will be established in this city. An alliance has already been formed of the wardens and chaplains of every state and federal institution in the country to push this work forward at the greatest possible speed. Mr. Hill announced. It was also stated that governors in 45 states of the Union had already given their enthusiastic backing to the program.

No Offices For Klansmen.

Washington, Aug. 22.—Following a conference with President Coolidge, R. B. Creager, Republican state chairman of Texas, announced that no person known to be a member of the Ku Klux Klan will be endorsed for any federal office in Texas. Mr. Creager added that the Republicans will have a complete ticket in the field this November and will wage the most vigorous campaign in the history of the state.

Hughes' Suggestion Approved.

Washington, Aug. 22.—With recognition of Mexico assured, the state department is working out the process by which diplomatic intercourse would be resumed. President Coolidge approved the suggestion of Secretary Hughes that, pending the reconvening of congress in December, the respective governments of Washington and Mexico City should be represented by a charge d'affaires.

Mail on Steamer Burns.

Tokyo, Aug. 22.—Fire which broke out on board the Admiral line steamer President Grant at Kake has been extinguished. Eight hundred bags of mail for Shanghai and Hongkong was destroyed and damage to the cargo has been estimated at approximately $50,000. The sailing of the President Grant on its return voyage to Seattle has been tentatively set for Aug. 23.

Mathey and Richards Defeated.

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 22.—Manuel Alonzo, the sensational Spanish Davis cup player, and Wallace F. Johnson, hero of many tennis court battles, won the right to enter the third round of the national doubles championship here on the splendid turf courts of the Longwood Cricket club, by defeating Dean Mathey and Vincent Richards by 9-7, 6-2, 6-8, 7-5.

Poland to Get Loan Here.

Copenhagen, Aug. 22.—Poland is to get a $100,000,000 loan from America in place of the 400,000,000 franc loan which was being negotiated in Paris but which broke down owing to conditions imposed by France. The loan is for a short term and is to be used in conjunction with an additional sum of $50,000,000 contributed by the government, to reform the currency.

Shortest Railroad.

You have heard of shortest railroads before. Always they're the most abbreviated ever. But off-hand one would grant the prize to Missoula, Mont. It has a railroad only 100 feet long. It connects the Northern Pacific with the C. M. & St. P., and is used as a transfer. It has no equipment, no employees, and no stations, yet the company that owns it gets 50 cents for every car that passes over its rails. Sixteen thousand have done so thus far. IS GOOD PROVERB

Wise Advice From Persia as to Choosing Friends.

Two to Avoid Are the "Candid" Person and the One Who Is Too Easily Offended.

An old Persian proverb runs, "Think twice before you make an enemy, and three before you make a friend." True—even if we think that "twice" and "thrice" should be transposed. As a matter of fact, however, they are in their right places.

Most of us, before experience teaches us wisdom, take to ourselves friends far too easily. We continue the friendship because we don't quite know how to end it; but in our hearts we wish certain of our "friends" a thousand miles away—permanently!

There's the painfully "candid friend," for a start. He—or she—tells us of our faults, our defects, our shortcomings, and rubs in hard all the things we know, but would like to forget!

"I'm sure no one would tell you but myself, old man, but do you know you are getting fat?"

Or when a new hat appears—"My dear, I know you don't mind what I say, but it doesn't suit you a bit! It would be all right for a girl of sixteen, but—"

Had I my time over again I would never have one of these candid friends, says a writer in London Answers. I've searched my memory and cannot remember when candid praise was given. It is always criticism. Candid friends are life-spoilers. Keep them out of your life.

Then there's the easily offended friend! Never have a friend of that type. Or if you have any, seize the first opportunity of letting them go out of your life. They will age you, worry you, and make a slave of you if they remain. You will always be apologizing, explaining, smoothing them down, begging their pardons. Your soul will be free to do what you like. They might be "offended!"

They are tyrants, and their tyranny grows worse the more you pander to their "touchiness." Get rid of them! Buy—as I did—a new hat, and tell them nothing about it. They are sure to be "offended," and then let them remain so.

Finally, there's the "friend" who uses you when her real friend isn't available. "Uses" is the right word! You are in reserve—to be used as required. That type should be barred, too.

Choose your friends carefully!

Book Agents' Best Field.

When Mrs. Smith moved out into a sparsely settled section of Brooklyn she thought one advantage of her location would be freedom from agents. But she was mistaken; they came thicker than ever.

First appeared the milk company solicitors, then book and magazine agents, mop and brush men, charity solicitors and then the vacuum cleaner agents. The vacuum men seemed to come in relays or waves. Mrs. Smith already had a patent sweeper, but she was always forced to answer the doorbell and say no to the agents, says the New York Sun and Globe.

Seeing her hopes of quiet and isolation of life in the suburbs blasted, Mrs. Smith the other day asked one of the agents why she was visited by so many salesmen.

"Oh," said he, "agents always make a specialty of thinly populated districts. We figure you folks out here don't have many of the latest things. It's our best field."

Eyes Only on One Side of Head.

Both eyes on the same side of the head is the "freak" distinction of flounders and soles. In these species of fish the head is unsymmetrically formed, the cranium being badly twisted in form. The body is strongly compressed, and the side in which the eyes are located is uppermost in all the actions of the fish. This upper side, be it right or left, is colored, while the eyeless side is white, or nearly so. The body of the real young flounder rests upright in the water, a fact well known to students of the finny tribes. As the flounder grows older there is a tendency to turn to one side, and the lower eye begins its migration to the other side. The movement of the eye in the tropical species is easily followed, as this genus reached a larger size than do most flounders before this change takes place. The larva is symmetrical, and in all cases transparent.

Selecting Talent.

The director went out on the lot and bawled for a fat actress. They sent him a fat actress.

"Have you a fur coat?" he asked.

"Yes," she replied.

"I'll rent it from you for $10 a day," said the director.

He then bawled for a fatter actress and went through the same line of conversation with her.

"What in heck are you driving at?" demanded the general manager.

"We're filming a big Alaska scene tomorrow. Our lovely heroine will wear three fur coats—her own, which fits her, and two on top of that."

Hard Luck.

Our pet peeve is this: After having spent one dull, lonesome week of our vacation at a farmhouse, to have two "peaches" arrive there on the very same train we are taking back home.—Boston Transcript.

Will Not Laugh in Captivity.

Some of us who have been fortunate enough to get a glimpse of a properly stocked zoological garden have seen the laughing jackass, and with one accord we have all wondered why he is so called. In captivity he does not laugh, nor even smile, and there is little or no resemblance, that we can trace, to our friend the jackass. The fact is that he is found in Australia and he laughs at his best only when at liberty in his habitat, and then he laughs vociferously in the morning and evening. His laugh is a loud, raucous noise, much like a mocking laugh, but hideous in the extreme. A family of these birds happening to locate near one's home will pretty nigh drive the humans to desperation. They are extremely curious and will spend hours watching humans at work. They are also attracted by the music of a church and will haunt such localities during service, every once in a while lending their aid with their terrific "laugh."

Native Arts of the Aztecs.

Since the great conquests of Peru and Mexico and the lesser expeditions into Central America and our Southwest, all objects made by the natives are more than likely to have a divided, artistic origin. In museums very careful distinction is made between pre-Columbian and post-Columbian arts. This is in no sense proof of inferiority of native creative power, but rather indicates the high status of all aesthetic expression in these favored regions since artisanship had arisen to a point where adaptation of exotic ideas was within the scope of both mental and physical powers. Only people dominated by iron superstitions in regard to the significance of design remain unaffected through contact. Only peoples lacking in technical skill refuse to copy.—M. D. C. Crawford in Arts and Decorations.

When a Man Is at His Prime.

From twenty-eight to forty-nine for the average man. Long ago a man was considered at his strongest and most beautiful between twenty and thirty, at his best as a leader or manager from thirty to forty, as an experienced man of business from forty to fifty, and as a counselor or judge of other men's troubles from fifty to sixty. Roughly these divisions are to some extent still correct. Modern life, however, with its increased opportunities for travel and education, has so speeded up conditions that young men of business and politics have by the twenties often acquired enough experience to allow them to rise to their prime early in life. At the other end of life, altered social conditions and better medical attention have allowed physical efficiency to be retained far longer.

Pigeon Finds Way by Sight.

A British royal air force pigeon, released from a balloon a mile and a half above the ground, was unable to see the earth below on account of a thick blanket of clouds. After flying around for a little time the bird gave up all hope of finding its way back to its home, some 150 miles away, and settled down comfortably on the balloon, much as Noah's dove settled on the ark when it could find no place to rest on account of the waters. The pigeon, however, had better luck than Noah's dove. After a time a rift appeared in the clouds, and the bird swooped from the balloon through the gap in the vapor, and two hours later had delivered the message tied to its leg. This incident indicates that a pigeon finds its way home by sight, not by instinct, as many have thought.

New Edible Plant.

A plant that belongs to the lettuce family and that is now cultivated in upper Egypt and can be grown with profit in certain parts of the Sudan is a new source of edible oil. The seed yields under pressure from 37 to 38 per cent of oil and certain specimens of fresh seed from the Sudan, which contained less than 4 per cent of water, yield more than 44 per cent. The oil is odorless, of a light yellow color and without a disagreeable taste. The seed is so small that it cannot be handled with ordinary equipment, but the oil product is so valuable that new machinery will no doubt be built to do the work.

Self-Mastery.

The greatest victory you can gain is to master yourself. Swami Paramananda writes: "The thirst for happiness is a common instinct in all mankind; but every one of us does not possess the secret of acquiring it, nor have we the power to retain it when it comes to us. This requires both wisdom and endurance. Perhaps for this reason the great men of all countries and ages have laid such tremendous emphasis on a life of self-discipline and self-control. Self-discipline enables us to organize and unite all our scattered forces. This necessarily increases our power for both thought and action."

Deaf Feel Sound.

Deaf people can be terribly startled by sounds. Owing to lack of hearing, the sense of feeling becomes highly developed, and some kinds of noises they "hear" with their whole persons. The chest, in particular, acts as a sounding-board for the reception and exaggeration of explosive sounds for its owner's annoyance. A slamming door, unexpected firing, or train whistle, can be no more startling to anyone with the use of his ears than to sensitive deaf people who may chance to be where the vibration of such sounds can reach them without interruption.

HOOSIER
—the Kitchen Cabinet that saves miles of steps

—the Only Kitchen Convenience that Adjusts Your Work-Table to Suit Your Height

Gymnasium instructors have a little trick of asking new members of their classes to hold their hands above their heads and open and close their fingers. After a minute or two the student usually suffers an acute pain in the muscles. Yet opening and closing the fingers is a simple, natural operation. It's the unnatural position in which the arms are held which wears one out.

Unless your work-table is adjusted to the proper height to suit your individual build, you stand in an unnatural position which puts a muscle strain on arms and back for such movements as rolling dough and beating eggs.

That is why so many women wear themselves out at their kitchen work. It is also why women who own the new HOOSIER are freed from such muscle-strains. For the new HOOSIER gives you a work-table adjusted to your comfort.

An initial payment as low as $1.00 will put a HOOSIER in your home.

ANCIENT CULTURE IN BURIED CITY

Tale of How Mongolian Town
Fell After Siege.

OLD BOOKS ARE UNEARTHED

In the deserts of Mongolia, far away from cities and civilization, a rumor originated some years ago of a dead city, abandoned by its inhabitants for centuries and buried ever more deeply beneath shifting sands. The rumor was difficult to verify. Few explorers penetrated into this wild and desolate country. Finally, in 1907, a Russian scientific expedition, led by Professor Kozlov, set out with the purpose of searching for the city. The task was difficult because the nomadic tribes in the region were suspicious of strangers and slow to give information.

Kozlov worked with tact and patience. He employed a Mongolian familiar with the native language to go about disguised as a merchant in an effort to get some hint of the city's location. But the Mongolian was suspected as an agent of the foreigners and for a long time could obtain no information. Finally he was compelled during a storm to camp near the city itself, without being aware of it. The natives regarded this as a sign of divine intervention and made no further difficulties about guiding him to the ruins. This was how the dead city of Kara-Khoto became known to the outside world.

Buried in Sand.

When the Russian exploring party approached Kara-Khoto with their Mongolian guide they were compelled to plow through sand drifts 15 feet deep. It was this sand, together with the arid climate of Mongolia, that had preserved the city's walls and monuments over a period of many centuries. The neighboring tribesmen, who had settled near the city ten generations before, declared that it always had been there as far back as their records reached.

The streets and houses of Kara-Khoto have been largely obliterated by waves of sand. But Kozlov's party found many interesting memorials in this Mongolian Pompeii. There were the remains of Buddhist temples and Mohammedan mosques. There were packages of Chinese paper money, bearing grim inscriptions threatening counterfeiters with the loss of their heads. There were silver ornaments and money, carefully hidden away by the original owners.

The most important discovery of all was a cone-shaped monument outside the city walls. In this monument was a library of 2,000 books, written in seven Eastern languages. Several other things found in and about the city helped to piece out the legend about the fate of the tribe which formerly lived there. In the Thirteenth and Fourteenth centuries, so the legend ran, the Chinese had sent out an army to capture Kara-Khoto. For several years they besieged the city in vain. Then a Chinese engineer conceived the idea of cutting off the water supply. He blocked up with sandbags the river which formerly flowed through the city and turned its course in a different direction. The people, desperate with thirst, dug a deep well inside the walls, but failed to get enough water to sustain life. Then the population buried all its treasures. The chief of the tribe killed his wife and daughter with his own hand and ordered a mass sortie through a breach in the wall. The doomed tribe rushed out, only to be slaughtered in the open by the superior forces of the Chinese.

Traces Bear Out Legend.

This grim legend was borne out by discoveries of the explorers. They found that a nearby river had been artificially diverted from its channel. And the wall of the city had a large breach, through which the last desperate sortie might well have been made.

The Russians found in the monument many signs of high culture on the part of the former inhabitants. There were books in Persian, Arabic and Hindoo script, as well as volumes in Mongolian and Chinese. There was a collection of more than three hundred sacred Buddhist pictures, painted on backgrounds of cloth and silk. There were many statues of Buddhist gods and goddesses. Traces of former canals were found in the city.

After thoroughly exploring Kara-Khoto and its surroundings, Kozlov hurried the less portable treasures and set out to discover Kookoonor, a lake in the vicinity which it was said no white man had ever seen, although French and German explorers had tried to reach it. The nomads who lived about the lake made every effort to prevent the travelers from launching a boat on it. They declared that the waters of Kookoonor were under a mysterious spell, that every boat would be irresistibly drawn to the bottom.

Notwithstanding these warnings, some of the members of the party embarked. They were caught in a heavy storm the first night, and the natives were certain that the wrath of the gods had been aroused. But the boat weathered the storm safely; and a skyrocket announced the arrival of the party on the other side, to the relief of Kozlov and the amazement of the Mongolians, who had never seen anything of the kind before.

Wild Buddhist Monks.

On the other side of the lake the Russians found three Buddhist monks, wild men with shaggy, matted hair and beards that had never been shaved. They were in great fear at first sight of the strangers. Later two of them proved accessible, but the third remained obstinately savage, refusing to say a word.

Lake Kookoonor did not mark the end of the expedition's adventures. Penetrating into the mountains of northern Tibet, the party encountered a band of mounted robbers, who attacked them with swarms of arrows. These were no match for the firearms of the Russians and the robbers were beaten off.

The story of these explorations was recently told by Professor Kozlov before a large and interested audience in the Moscow Polytechnical Institute. The lecture was illustrated with motion-picture views; and a map of Mongolia, showing the location of the buried city and the route of the expedition, hung on a blackboard behind the speaker's stage. Kozlov, an erect, soldierly figure, with deep-set, piercing eyes, confined himself chiefly to the narrative of his past experiences, touching only briefly on the prospects of a new exploring expedition which he is planning to lead into Mongolia and Tibet. He spoke in more detail on the latter subject in a personal interview with the writer.

The new exploring party is to be made up of seventeen Russians and four Mongolians. Leaving Petrograd it will proceed by rail to eastern Siberia. From there the route turns south, to Unga, the capital of Mongolia. The expedition is planned for three years. The first year will be spent in Mongolia, the second in Tibet, and the third will be devoted to the homeward journey, which may be through India or Chinese Turkestan.

Two Women on Trip.

"The purposes of the expedition," said Professor Kozlov, "are purely scientific."

"One novel feature of this expedition is the fact that two women will be included in the party. My wife, who once rode through Mongolia on horseback and who knows how to handle a rifle, will accompany the expedition as an ethnographer and zoologist. She is acquainted with the Tibetan language and will study the customs of Tibetan and Mongolian women. The other woman in the party, a friend of my wife, is a doctor and natural scientist. She expects to collect butterflies and other insect specimens."—New York Times.

CULT WOULD CENSOR DRESS

Greek Zealots Attack "Immodest" Feminine Attire.

Fashionable women in Athens, Greece, and foreign women who follow the modern trend in dress, are being terrorized by the violent activities of a local organization which terms itself "the zealots of Christ." The members of this association have taken a vow to compel modesty in women's dress by force. Women wearing low-necked gowns or going about with bare arms are often roughly handled, and the exposed parts of their persons are smeared with tar.

In several cases recently the male escorts of women thus attacked have given the roughs some very severe beatings, but nevertheless the systematic campaign of molestation goes on.

Co-Operative Drying Plants Are Favored

Found Successful in Increasing Profit From Orchard.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Community fruit-drying plants have been found to be a successful means of increasing the orchard profits of the small growers who have a surplus which they are unable to market in any other way, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, if the total quantity of such surplus in a community is sufficient to justify the necessary expense. The organization of such a co-operative plant should be governed by the same fundamental rules that have been found necessary in the development of other co-operative ventures.

It must first be definitely ascertained whether the quantity of unused fruit is actually such as will make the establishment of an evaporator or drying plant profitable. This information can only be obtained by a careful canvass of the district and a tabulation of the results. The making of such a canvass is a task calling for conservatism and the exercise of good judgment, for the reason that unintentional but gross overstatement of the unmarketed and unused portion of the fruit which could be used as evaporator stock is the rule rather than the exception. It must be borne in mind that in the case of apples, only mature, reasonably sound fruit of fair size will make a marketable dry product and that estimates which include premature drops, specked and decayed fruits, and small-sized cider apples are worse than useless because misleading. The canvass should take into account all fruits grown in the district, the location of the center of supply, the length of time over which the ripening of each will extend, and the maximum quantity per day which the plant will be required to handle.

With this data in hand it will be possible to determine the size and type of evaporator needed. As the fruits will in most cases be varied the plant should be of a general-purpose type, so constructed that it will handle equally well all materials, such as apples, peaches, plums and prunes.

Check Cucumber Beetle by Using Dust Mixture

One of the best methods of controlling the cucumber beetle, according to Carl J. Drake, state entomologist at Iowa State college, is to dust the young plants with a mixture of one part of calcium arsenate and 20 parts of gypsum.

The dust can be applied with a shaker made by punching holes in the bottom of a half-gallon tin can with an eight-penny nail. The first application should be made immediately after the young plants break through the ground. After that the plants should be dusted either early in the morning or late in the evening from two to three times per week and following rains.

Usually from 10 to 12 applications per season are all that are required, although more are necessary in the case of exceptionally severe attacks by the beetles. If these directions are followed rather closely, there will be no trouble in controlling the cucumber beetle.

Destructive Qualities of Heavy Motortrucks

Miles and miles of ribbonlike roads are the hope of every motorist, and when speaking of motorists these days it touches almost every home in the country. But, though the road builders lay them smooth, they seemed to have so far been unable to cope with the destructive qualities of heavy motortrucks now used to a large extent in commercial transportation on smooth surfaces.

Millions of dollars have been spent and are being spent annually for the extension to all parts of the country of good roads, in answer to the demands of the people for easy internal means of communication by way of the motorcar. Long-distance touring shows a yearly increase, and motortruck transportation is increasing.

Sudden Change in Milk Checks Laying of Flock

Many people who feed milk in some form to their laying flock regularly have been obliged to learn one thing about the feeding. A sudden change from sweet milk one day to sour the next, or back again, causes digestive troubles as a rule, and either checks the laying of the flock or upsets the feeding rations so that the milk grain feed varies from day to day. Buttermilk, skimmed milk, sour or curd or sweet milk are all desirable feeds for chickens, but they should be fairly regular feeds, or fed in small amounts, if a change is necessary.

Corn for Silage Must Be Cut Fine and Packed

Corn for silage must be cut fine and tramped well in the silo if it is desired to make the best quality of feed and fill the silo to its greatest capacity, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The usual length of cutting varies from one-fourth of an inch to one inch, but the latter is a little too long, as the pieces do not pack so readily in the silo, and they are not so completely consumed in feeding as the shorter lengths.

CENSUS FIGURES SHOW
INCREASE IN DIVORCESRatio Compared With Marriages
Up 50 Per Cent in Six Years.

Washington.—A sharp increase in the last six years in the ratio of divorces to marriages is disclosed in preliminary reports for 1922, announced by the census bureau. Computation is made for half a dozen northeastern states, the first for which figures have been completed in a nation-wide survey.

The 1922 ratio was almost half again as large as it was in 1916, there having been almost 9.3 divorces to each 100 marriages in 1922, compared with almost 6.3 in 1916.

Analysis of the statistics for the six states shows the number of marriages in 1922 were one-eighth less than in 1916, while the number of divorces was almost one-third more. The states covered in the report were New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey and Delaware.

Marriages in these states in 1922 numbered 80,883, as compared with 92,531 in 1916, and divorces 7,513, compared with 5,793. There was a decrease of 11,648 marriages in the states, or about 12½ per cent, while divorces increased 1,720 in number, or almost 30 per cent.

There was an increase in the number of marriages in only one of the six states—New Hampshire. There was a decrease in the number of divorces in Vermont, but the ratio of divorces to the number of marriages showed an increase in that state as it did in the other five states in which divorces increased in number.

Reds Printing Millions of "Propaganda" Books

Bucharest.—Figures received here summarizing the activities of the publishing business in Russia, which is purely an enterprise of the soviet state, indicate that a great effort is being made to convince the Russian people of the correctness of Bolshevik political, social and economic theories. The soviet publishing house issued from its presses in Moscow and put into circulation throughout Russia during the last 12 months no less than 14,500,000 volumes covering the field of economics, politics, history and even fiction.

Aside from the obvious propaganda tendencies of the volumes on political and economic subjects, the soviet historians have sought to show how the world has suffered because of its hostility to Bolshevik doctrines, and in many of the fiction volumes the endeavor has been to prove that opposition to soviet doctrines has warped, limited or distorted individual lives.

Hasty Conclusion Loses
Paris Doctor Fat Fee

Paris.—A Paris surgeon is telling a good story on himself. He was called in to operate on an American woman for appendicitis, and when the cure was complete the patient, seeking to show her gratitude in some way that was not too commonplace, embroidered a cigar case and took it to the surgeon.

Unfortunately the surgeon had just had a run of patients who had paid for his services by presents of little intrinsic value, so he could not help saying, "No, really, madam, take away such rubbish; a 1,000-franc note would be much more acceptable."

"All right," said the American woman, and opening the cigar case she drew a 1,000-franc bill from it, laid it on the table, and said coolly, "There were five others like it in the case."

Old Sailing Vessels
Puzzle Modern Mariners

Norfolk, Va.—The reappearance of the Leviathan on the high seas caused many an "old salt" to reflect on the passing of the American sailing ship which has now virtually disappeared. The modern mariner, however, knows as little about the old-time sailing vessels as the flapper knows about her great-grandmother's spinning wheel.

The sailors at their seagoing school here are familiar with nautical terms and can quote the nomenclature of a modern oil-burner from bow to stern. But when an examiner asked them to name the seven masts of a sailing vessel, only a few could recall the names offhand.

Fore, main, mizzen, pusher, driver, jigger and spanker are the names in order, running fore and aft, of a seven-masted ship. Some authorities give them the names of forecastle, fore, main, mizzen, jigger, spanker or driver and after masts. Others compromise by naming them from bow to stern after the days of the week, beginning with Sunday.

Child Marriages Many
but Few Endure Long

Child marriages in the United States are increasing at an alarming rate.

Statistics show that 15,000 boys and 1,200 girls less than 15 years old are married. The average life of infant marriages is only a few years, and more often a few months, according to Professor A. N. Farmer of Des Moines, Ia.

When asked what he wished to do with the money, he said:

"Want to buy an automobile."

"Cars are getting cheap," said the agent, "but you can't get one for $37.50, can you?"

"Nope," said the young man, "but I've got $12.50, and with the $37.50 I get from you I'll have $50, and that'll be my first payment, see," he said cheerfully.

"But what security will we have," continued the agent, "if you buy the car on payments?"

"Why, I'll give you a mortgage on the car as soon as I get it," he said.

"That would only be a second mortgage," said the agent, "as the automobile company will hold a chattel mortgage on the automobile until it is paid for."

"Well, I didn't know that," said the youth, "I guess I'm out o' luck."

Film-flam.

It isn't often that the movie folks break into this column, for the simple reason that some folks might think they were getting undue publicity, but here is a laugh or two that earns a place:

"The reason so many of us fail to recognize opportunity," says Martha Mattox, "is because it usually goes around disguised as hard work."

Whereupon Helen Ferguson comes back with a bit of philosophy of her own, to-wit:

"For the first year, love takes the bride to her husband's office; after that, suspicion does it."

All of which has nothing to do with the newspaper headline that science had proved that men talk more in their sleep than women.

When Monty Banks read this in one of the Los Angeles papers he remarked:

"A man ought to have a chance to do some talking around his own home some time, without being interrupted, corrected or shut up."

"All Comforts of Home" Plus.

An interesting comparison between the old-time "windjammer" that consumed months in crossing the ocean, and the last word in transport luxury, the Leviathan, may be made in reading a description of the latter. Besides great speed and passenger capacity, the giant ship contains a ballroom, dining rooms, smoking rooms, tea rooms, swimming pool, gymnasium, special health baths, a small hothouse and accommodations for dogs.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

Tuesday afternoon at the Pickaway county Teachers' institute Professor O. L. Warren, of the department of education of Mansfield state normal school, Mansfield Pennsylvania, finished his discourse on Apperception. He brought out many new ideas and his topic was interesting.

Professor Edwin Barlow Evans, dean and professor of English, Thiel College, Greenville, Pennsylvania, talked on an interesting subject; "How to Judge a Book."

The attendance Tuesday was very good, 119 teachers being present.

At the Wednesday morning session, Professor Evans made an address on the "Character of Macbeth" and Professor O. L. Warren talked on "Getting Into the Row."

AMUSEMENTS

"The Fog" which comes to the Met theater on Wednesday is one of the outstanding productions of the year, according to advance reports received here. This Metro picture combines every element which goes into the making of a screen masterpiece. The story by William Dudley Pelley, is chock full of thrills, pathos and beautiful romance.

And the absorbing story is made to live on the screen by one of the most distinguished groups of players ever assembled for one picture. The cast includes Mildred Harris, Louise Dresser, Ethel Wales, Louise Fazenda, Cullen Landis, Ralph Lewis, David Butler, Marjorie Prevost, Ann May, Frank Currier and Edward Phillips.

The story is based on the struggles of a boy and a girl to pierce the fog of tyranny and misunderstanding which enveloped them. And their final triumph, after many adventures and disillusionments, is brought about through their love for each other.

The story was adapted by H. H. Van Loan. The scenario was prepared by Winifred Dunn. The photoplay was directed by Paul Powell under the personal supervision of Max Graf, and photographed by John R. Arnold.

CENTENARY.

Mrs. H. Rose Dresbach of Halls-ville, and daughter, Mrs. J. E. Rowlands, of Columbus, left Wednesday for Paris, Illinois, where Edgar county is celebrating its 100th anniversary with a grand homecoming, this being the birthplace and former home of Mrs. Dresbach. While there they will attend the annual reunion of the families of Dow, David and O'Neal Morris.

IMMIGRANT SHIP

Brings Many People to Our Shores Seeking Happiness and Prosperity.

The chauffeurs of the taxis, the paper boys, even the little shiner in his box seemed to be known to me. I wondered where I had seen those faces before, this being my first visit to the United States. Then suddenly came into my mind that I had seen them all on board the immigrant steamer.

They had all been; Isaac, Benjamin, Isahel, Rosenthal, and the rest of them, all coming from different places in Russia and the provinces of that country. All of them had come to the United States to seek a better life. They had not found in the old country a living and a life in happiness and peace. The United States had more than one hundred millions of inhabitants, but on board that immigrant steamer was the material of at least four hundred new ones, and in New York I am sure I found hundreds of thousands of the same type. The sight of that crowd on board the immigrant steamer could not help but make one think of how life would be to them when they came ashore. They were all uneducated, could hardly read and write, all insufficiently dressed, undernourished and probably unable to work hard on account of their weak bodies. Yet all would have to earn a living, the not knowing one word of the American language.

Maybe they are all happy now, just as happy as the rest of their race in the states. But are they Americans? Or will they ever be Americans? That is the question I have put to myself as Americans to the very backbone. Most of these have denied it, yet facts seem to answer in the affirmative. If they will ever be Americans the States must indeed be a wonderful melting pot, superior to the rest of the nations. If they can teach people of so many nationalities and languages to be of one mind and soul, they have achieved more than any nation in the world ever did. It is remarkable to see how people, forever squabbling in Europe, when immigrating to the States seem to cooperate as good citizens. Irishmen work together with Englishmen, Germans with French and Austrians with Czechoslovaks. Maybe they do not cooperate very intimately; they are, anyhow, less antagonistic than when at home.—From "The Typical American" by Sven V. Knudsen, in the September Scribner's.

The Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"O, well," said Kelly, "I guess it will all come right if I just wait. I am a good waiter."

"The only place in this world for a good waiter," said the Hotel Stenographer, "is the dining room. People who just drift are like things that drift. They finish on a sand bank some place where they don't do themselves or any one else any good. If you go down to the river, Kelly, you will see a lot of things drifting down stream but you will never see anything drifting up stream. Everything that is going up stream has power behind it."

"I went to school with three girls. One of them had a natural gift for dancing, one a natural gift for singing and the third had no gift for either. The girl with the natural gift for dancing is the mother of six in the sixth floor walk-up apartment over on Heniken street, the one with the natural gift for singing is the old maid head of a washboard department in the Boston house and the girl who had no gift is playing a vaudeville circuit with a singing and dancing act that brings her in four hundred real dollars every Saturday night."

"The first two drifted like you are doing. The other sang till her throat was raw and danced till she wore a couple of inches off the lower end of her legs. I went with the two who have here to see her at the theater the other night and they both sighed and said she had all the luck in the world."

"Kelly, no rabbit's foot, no four-leafed clover, no lucky penny, no horseshoe, no graveyard sand ever brought anybody any luck who was not willing to get behind that luck and shove like a flivverite stuck in a mud hole."

"There is a lot of room at the top for everybody. Most of it is made by people who went to sleep there and rolled off but every one of them had to work to get there, they didn't drift."

Shirkers in Abraham's Day.

There were always some people in the world who shirked their work. Far back in the days when Ur of the Chaldees where Abraham lived was a fine city they had them. Perhaps because there were so many of them the Father of the Faithful got up and left. Not long ago men were digging in the ruins of the old city, one of them tells us, searching for the foundation deposits of a temple. The diggers came across a small box containing a statuette of the ancient king carrying the first basket of earth from the site, and underneath that he found a beautifully polished but perfectly blank marble tablet. Upon this should have been the history of the building, but he could only assume that the scribe had drawn pay for work he never performed. Probably no one ever knew of the rascality until the English explorers discovered it.

Lightning Worth 1.2 Cents a Bolt.

Lightning, symbol of power since time immemorial, is worth just 1.2 cents per bolt, engineers of the General Electric company in Schenectady, N. Y., estimate. The voltage, or electrical pressure, of a stroke of lightning is 50,000,000 volts, they figure. But as "fast as lightning" is no idle phrase, they claim, and a flash is so soon over with that the energy involved is exceedingly small. One thousandth part of a second is the time which a flash usually lasts. If the assumed current of the flash, 1,000 amperes, is multiplied by the number of volts, they explain, a power of 50,000,000 kilowatts is obtained. In one second the energy produced is therefore only 500 kilowatts. At the rate of eight cents per kilowatt hour charged in this city, the value of one of these discharges of Nature's heavy artillery would be only 1.2 cents.

The Useful Thumb Tack.

Unless the lower hem of a window shade is rather close-fitting, the flat piece of wood run in to hold it even will often work itself out at one end, for several inches. This is especially apt to happen if the shade does not hang precisely straight. A small, flat-topped thumb tack, such as draftsman use, at one corner, on the window side, will hold the wood firmly and not be visible from outside. Thumb tacks are invaluable also for holding firmly in place either paper or cloth used for lining the bottoms of drawers. Being flat, nothing can catch in them. Stores that sell them usually keep, also, a little instrument made for lifting them, saving the breaking of fingernails or knife blade.

Cuba's Fresh-Water Fish.

The fresh waters of Cuba are inhabited by fishes unlike those found in the fresh waters in the United States. Some of these are evidently indigenous, derived in the waters they now inhabit directly from marine forms. Two of these are eyeless species, inhabiting streams in caverns. They have no relatives in the fresh waters of any other region, the blind fishes in American caves being of a wholly different type. Some of the Cuban fishes are common to the fresh waters of the other West Indies. Of northern types, only one, the alligator gar, is found in Cuba, and this is evidently a filibuster immigrant from the coast of Florida.

Second Elijah.

In south India cholera had been raging through a village, but every man and woman who could walk had come to watch the drunken devil priest tear the living sacrifice to death with his teeth. Then, dipping his long whip in the warm blood of the dying goat, he danced round in a frenzy, beating the crowd and assuring them that he was driving the cholera goddess away from the village. The little Christian community gathered to pray. Suddenly the word came that the chief priest himself was down with cholera, and he sent to beg the white evangelist to come and save him. He went, and to the general amazement the man was saved.

Apologized for the Fish.

Polliteness has developed among the Orientals to a degree of extravagance that is intensely amusing to visitors. Ofttimes to the people themselves, as was the case when the popular Prince Kuni of Japan was fishing at Ritsurin Koen and twice lost a big fish from his line and the governor of the province appeared and made profuse apologies for the unfriendly and inconsiderate behavior of the fish.—Ohio State Journal.

Useless Effort.

Joan was to have a birthday party. She was anxious to conduct herself correctly, and was playing her mother with questions. "Well, dear," said her mother in answer to one concerning the advisability of saying grace before the meal, "for such an informal little party I hardly think you need say grace." Accordingly, when all the guests were seated, Joan, from the head of the table, announced, solemnly: "Mother says this is such an informal little party we need not say grace."—Kansas City Star.

Farmer's Assistants.

The bluebird has been proved by examination to be of great assistance to the farmer in combating insect pests. Sixty-eight per cent of its food is made up of bugs, etc., and what little vegetable matter it consumes is of the most harmless kind. The robin is an omnivorous feeder, and though injuring cultivated fruit to some extent, renders a distinctly useful purpose about the farm with its large consumption of worms and insects.

HOW TOWN GOT PECULIAR NAME

Peculiar, Mo., Unconsciously Christened by Peeved Post-office Department Official.

Washington.—There is a very peculiar story connected with the naming of Peculiar, Mo.—which is also a peculiar name for a town.

The federal government does not name towns and hamlets when they are born or feel the urge for a cognomen, but the Post Office department does regulate them to the extent of prohibiting duplicating of names within the same state. So when a newly-formed community in Missouri suggested a certain name for its post office, the department informed the inhabitants there was already one by that name in their state.

Several other names were chosen by the residents and submitted, but always with the same result. Finally an exasperated official of the department, in refusing the latest choice, wrote the city fathers among other things "that it was mighty peculiar they could not find a good name for their town."

Whereupon he received the following reply: "Acting on your suggestion, we select the name Peculiar." And so Peculiar is on the map of today.

Rule in Naming New Towns.

There is only one rule in the naming of new towns, and that is that there shall be but one of the same name in a state. But that does not prohibit other states from boasting towns of the same name. For instance, there are 45 names used more than 20 times each to designate towns and cities.

Benjamin Franklin is remembered as an inspiration more than any other person, and Franklin as a town name takes the prize, occurring 31 times in 31 states.

The others in point of popularity run: Clinton, 30 times; Chester and Arlington, 29 of each; Washington, 28; Troy, Salem, Madison, Marion, Manchester and Clayton, 27; Glenwood, Kingston and Newport, 26; Ashland, Centerville and Cleveland, 25; Auburn, Dover, Hillsboro, Lincoln, Monroe, Oxford, Princeton, Springfield, Warren and Union, 24; Greenville and Wilson, 23; Belmont, Buffalo, Canton, Dayton, Eureka, Liberty, Milford and Plymouth, 22; Burlington and Lebanon, 21; Portland, Lexington, Jamestown, Hudson and Danville, 20.

Bane of Postoffice Clerks.

Duplicated names are the bane of the postal clerk, and the Yankee reputation for originality rises staggering when confronted by the apparent lack of imagination used to name American communities. There are even two Chicagos, six Philadelphias, seven Detroit and 14 Denvers.

Similarity in names also causes the postal department considerable trouble. Indistinct penmanship might easily confuse Eldora, Iowa, with Eldorado, Iowa. In Pennsylvania alone there are 13 communities whose names begin with the prefix Green: Greene, Greenbrier, Greenburt, Greencastle, Green Land, Greenoch, Greenpark, Greenboro, Greensburg, Greenstone, Greentown, Greenville and Greenwald.

There is a partiality for Bloom as a prefix in New York state, as, for example, Bloomingburg, Bloomingdale, Blooming Grove, Bloomington and Bloomville.

Foreign cities have contributed their names freely in this country. There are 18 towns known as Paris and a like number of Geneva, 17 Berlins, despite the war, 12 Moscovs, 11 Viennas, six Pekins and two Brussels.

Master Printers Open International Bureau

Gothenburg, Sweden.—The establishment of an international bureau of master printers in Sweden is one of the results of the world congress of master printers which has just ended in Gothenburg. This meeting of expert printers was attended by 150 delegates from eighteen countries, including the United States, England, France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Sweden, Denmark and Norway.

It was set forth that a central bureau was needed in order to collect and distribute information regarding industrial disputes and settlement, means of combating unemployment, new methods of cost accounting, development of standardization of paper, presses, etc., the establishment of unit prices, and similar topics of general interest to the trade. The meeting passed a resolution that the Swedish Association of Master Printers be invited to open such a central bureau.

A bulletin will be issued in English, French and German, and the financial support of the central bureau will come from the various national bodies of printers who avail themselves of its service.

Austrians Moving to Berlin.

Mr. and Mrs. John Neuding most delightfully entertained to a 6 o'clock dinner Tuesday evening honoring Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pugh on their return home from a wedding trip north. The dining room was most attractive in its decorations of pink and white. Hanging from the chandeliers was a big bell of pink and white with white streamers running to the four corners of the table with pink rosettes and in the center of the table was a big pink and white wedding cake which was cut by the bride, Mrs. Pugh. In the cake was found a thimble, button, ring and a coin. Miss Riebel being successful in finding the ring and Master Charles Kirkpatrick the coin. Seated at the bride's table were Mr. and Mrs. Pugh, Rev. Riebel, Miss Lottie Riebel, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Kirkpatrick and daughter, Mary Ellen and son, Charles William, Miss Josephine Pugh, Mrs. A. H. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. John Neuding and little daughter, Rosemary. Mrs. Neuding was assisted by Mrs. Kirkpatrick and Mrs. A. H. Morris, of Columbus.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Gildersleeve and daughters, Marcella and Roselyn Maude, and son, Paul, and Mrs. Maude Snyder motored to Chillicothe and Waverly Tuesday of last week and on returning in the evening picnicked at beautiful Elm Grove, 12 miles below Chillicothe.

Tuesday morning at 7:30 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, Rev. Father Hannan officiating, was solemnized the marriage of Miss Iona Wright, daughter of Mrs. Mary Wright, of Pherson, and Mr. William F. Shelton, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Shelton, of Grove City, formerly of this county. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Shook of Grove City, sister and brother-in-law of the groom. The bride was attired in a gray Canton crepe dress with hat to match. The bridesmaid was attired in a blue Canton crepe dress with hat to match. Immediately after the wedding the guests were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Howell, 525 Elm avenue, to a wedding breakfast. The happy couple then departed on a motor trip to relatives and friends in the east. On their return they will make their future home in Columbus where the groom has a clerical position with the Capital City Packing company.

Little Dorothy Glick, of Shady Place, will entertain forty of her little friends to a garden party Thursday, August 23, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Stanley Glick.

Mrs. John W. Myers, of Williamsport, entertained today in honor of Miss Esther Hornbeck, of Marengo, Illinois. A number of guests were present from this city.

Mrs. A. M. Wiegand will entertain to bridge Thursday in honor of her niece, Mrs. James Cheek of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and Mrs. Ralph R. Upton, of Seattle, Washington.

Miss Grace Clarke entertains to cards this afternoon.

Mrs. W. J. Weaver will entertain to a dinner party Friday in honor of Mrs. Ralph R. Upton of Seattle, Washington.

About 76 gathered at the home of Carl Boch, of Pherson, to attend the reunion of the McPherson family. A splendid dinner was served on the lawn and was enjoyed by everyone.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank our neighbors and friends for their kindness and sympathy during our recent bereavement.

INCORPORATION

James J. Hinde Preparing for Organization of Paper Box Company.

James J. Hinde was in Columbus Tuesday in conference with the secretary of state concerning the incorporation of the Hinde Paper Box company. The Ohio Blue laws in regard to the sale of stock are being rigidly enforced at this time. The set up as planned by Messrs. Hinde & Sons conforms entirely with the requirements of the secretary of state and also the department of commerce, division of securities of whom they have the hearty cooperation.

Ohio state laws are now looked upon as giving better protection to the investor than do the laws of many other states.

MOVED TO CIRCLEVILLE.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark Hunsicker and daughter, Margaret, have moved from Woodlyn to the Walling homestead on West Union street, this city. They recently purchased this property and have made extensive improvements and have converted it into a thoroughly modern home.

MRS. SIMMONS DEAD.

Mrs. Elizabeth Simmons died at St. Francis hospital, Columbus, Saturday, August 17, the result of a broken hip. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Dumm, who lived for many years at South Bloomfield. Burial was in Green Lawn cemetery by the side of her husband, who preceded her a year ago last March. She leaves one brother, William Dumm, of Columbus.

Architecture Reflects History.

Like most Alsatian towns, Metz reflects its Franco-Prussian history in its architecture. Part of the fortifications were begun by the French and finished by the Germans. The Roman Catholic cathedral looks down over the Lutheran church. And the city gates, of which there are ten, are doubly named, Porte d'Allemagne or Deutsche tor, and so on.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE.

The 241 acre home farm of J. E. Renick will be sold on the premises next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. This is one of the best farms in Ohio and has all new, modern equipment. Appraised at $225 an acre. 22augd4w1.

THE BERRY PATCH

By FANNY RICHARDSON

Copyright, 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

T THE age of eighteen one should be blissfully happy, even in a stuffy train—especially when one is the proud possessor of two boxes of chocolates, roses and four magazines. But Isabell's usually smiling mouth was puckered into an unhappy little twist.
The ticket she had put in her glove read "Lesterville," where, isolated from suitors, theaters, dances and good times, she was expected to spend an eventless vacation away from the city with her aunt, who was to strictly see to it that she did nothing else but eat good food, fresh from the farm, and rest.

Perfectly ridiculous, wasn't it, that such an attractive girl as Isabell, with absolutely nothing the matter with her, should be made to spend her vacation in such a place? Her aunt had said there were no young people in the neighborhood. Isabell laughed as she recollected. Who even heard of a neighborhood without young people?

However, her aunt was true to her word. After Isabell had stayed four days in Lesterville she had not seen anyone her own age except the tawny-haired, freckle-faced farmhand, Isabell, craving companionship, thought the boy "better than nothing," and they spent many a half-hour together.

When Isabell had been a week in Lesterville she heard there was going to be a costume party in the village.
Her freckle-faced friend told her of it.
She began making plans for it, having made up her mind she was going.

Arriving conspicuously late at the party, there was nothing for them to do but watch the games which were in progress on lantern-bedecked lawns.
A young man dressed as Captain Kidd, evidently their host, offered Isabell his place in a game of croquet. "But I don't know how," she had objected.
Tom, at their host's suggestion, eagerly took his mallet and joined in the game.

"I'm sorry you don't play," said the host, "but there are six or seven other games you could join. They're dancing the Virginia Reel in the barn.
Come, let's do that."

Smiling, Isabell took his arm. "It's quite a while since I've done it, but I'll try."

And a few moments later Isabell was "doing it." She little knew what a gay picture she made in her Egyptian costume, dancing in and out, clapping and bowing to her unknown escort, whose fiercely grotesque costume seemed to enhance the beauty of his little partner's outfit.

"Let's play 'It,'" said Captain Kidd,
after the dancing was over.

Then followed a period of explanations. In spite of the fact that Isabell knew very few of the games, she found her host more than eager to explain.
He took her to this group and that group, introduced her, but never once let any of the other men be her partner.

Somebody tugged at her dress. It was Tom. "Hurry, we got to go now, or we'll get caught. The thing's 'most over!"

Dismayed, Isabell looked at her sandalled foot. "I can't, Tom, until he finds my sandal."

"We can't wait," he said. "Come with me now—easy, this way—so they won't notice."

It was ten o'clock, the day after the party. Isabell was getting ready to go blueberrying. In a sunbonnet, hardly to be recognized as the dazzling Egyptian princess of the night before, yet certainly as desirable, she was soon walking in a thicket of berry bushes.
From time to time she wondered how she had been able, as she recalled last night's experiences, to get home ahead of her aunt, hustle under the bed-clothes still in her costume, and wear the innocent expression she had worn when her aunt had opened her door to see if all was well.

For an hour Isabell picked, humming snatches of a gay little tune. Then there had been a slight rustling in the bushes, a scream from Isabell, and the berries had been scattered in a hundred directions. Then she had run and run. A young man was coming toward her. Instinctively he held out his arms and she ran right into them.

Absurd, isn't it, to try and work against fate? How hard Isabell's aunt had worked to keep her niece away from parties and excitement. And she had only to send her niece out to a blueberry patch where there wasn't supposed to be a soul around for miles, and a young man dropped right out of the clouds at her feet.

It was Captain Kidd who carried Isabell back to the road. He took a long time about it, going around a longer way than necessary. "You say you only saw his horns?" he asked.

"Yes. But I don't think I'll ever be able to go berrying again."

He looked down at the pale face.
"He wouldn't hurt you. He probably ran faster than you did."

"When we get to the road, I'm going to give you your slipper."

"You have my slipper!" she cried.
"Why, it's just like the Cinderella fairly tale, isn't it?"

"My, but we're taking a long time getting to the road. Why, you've taken me around the longest way.
Naughty prince! Just for that, I'm going to make you carry me right up to the house. Auntie will have a fit!"

And auntie did have a fit, but she might just as well have saved her strength.

If Overnight Guests Came

If friends should come for the night, would you have adequate sleeping room for them? Or would someone be forced to get as much rest as possible from some uncomfortable makeshift?
With just enough sleeping rooms for the family, there comes the embarrassment of asking someone to sleep on something never intended to be used as a bed.

A Northfield will relieve you of any such emergency. Beneath the soft, low seat is a full-size, restful bed—perfectly concealed. You will never be aware of its presence until the need for it arises.

A large variety of Overstuffed, Fibre Reed and Period designs are available. You can select single pieces or suites that will harmonize with the rest of your furniture. We will be glad to assist you in making a choice.

CHATS WITH BROWNIE
Billie Brownie had had a number
of interesting chats with many animals and birds of late, and they had told him a good deal about themselves.
"Of course," Billie Brownie said
to himself, "I can see that the animals are all nice to look at, and that they have most wonderful ways, but I wonder if they wouldn't tell me more if I went about to visit them."
So Billie Brownie had gone and
he had seen many of the animals and birds, as I've said, and he was planning to tell the Brownies about these chats.
"You see," Billie Brownie said,
when all the Brownies were gathered together, "I knew that so many of the birds and animals were of the same colors as the places where they made their homes and that they were thus so as to be safe and not seen."
"I knew that they had costumes which were of a great deal of protection to them."
"But I wanted to hear more, so I talked to a good many. There had been some kind of an exhibition of animals and of their fine ways, and I thought perhaps the different creatures
would tell me something of it."
"There were lectures about the animals, too. Perhaps they would tell me of these, also, I thought."
"And they told me a great deal.
Yes, I have had some interesting chats
of late."
"I talked to His Grace, the Swan.
He told me that they had partially webbed feet, which were of a great deal of help to them in swimming."
The Pelican told me that their feet
were webbed and their toes jointed
together for this very reason.
"The Penguin told me that their wings made useful paddles, when they were going about traveling."
"I talked to a fine sea turtle who told me that he had front arms (or he said I could call them something else if I thought of a better name for them) which were very useful to him
in swimming."
"These had bones which were flat and which were covered by skin and which served as the finest kind of paddles and were wonderfully fine
when he wanted to swim as he had told me."
"Solid and flat bones made nice paddles," he explained.
"I had a chat with the sea-otter who told me that his hind feet helped him to jump when he was on land, for he said:
"As you can guess by my name, I am not much on the land, but I am a very fine swimmer."
"A very fine swimmer, indeed."
"Old Mr. Beaver was one of the most interesting I met."
"He said: 'Billie Brownie, I am glad to tell you anything you want to know. It is summer time now and I am off on a holiday, visiting my friends and so forth."
"It is not working time. What is
it you would like to have me tell you?"
"Something of yourself," I asked
him. "I have been hearing of how useful various animals and other creatures found their legs and arms and that they were made so they would
be useful."
"I have thought it was wonderful the way they all were of such assistance—like useful tools or like having private automobiles to help them about."
"Mr. Beaver laughed.
"Well, if those are the things you've been finding out I'm a good one to come to for
I have two kinds
of limbs."
"My front ones
are splendid for taking hold of things and for getting me about,
while my back
ones are splendid for swimming."
"You see, my toes are longer and stronger in my back legs than in my front ones and they are covered with skin which makes them a wonderful help to me when I swim—but not much when I walk. It is because of them that I'm not so very graceful
on my feet."
"But no matter. One can't have everything."
"Such were the chats I had on my last trip," Billie Brownie ended.

DANCE EDICT

Kalamazoo Folk Must Watch Their Step—Stringent Regulations.

Kalamazoo dancing clubs and fraternal organizations were split wide open by a proposed amendment which would make the city's drastic dancing ordinance still more stringent.

The proposal offered by the chief of police and the policewomen was passed at first reading after a lengthy debate Monday night and will come up for final consideration Monday, September 3. The fox trot, pivot turn, doffing of men's coats, and waist line contact were the principal objects of attack in the proposed amendment, which would prohibit "soul gazing" by partners into one another's eyes for a considerable time.

The ordinance requires dancers to look over one another's right shoulders. It was explained that this provision was decided on for "sanitary reasons," so as to prevent partners from breathing into one another's faces.

Among the other practices that would be barred are suggestive steps or motions placing the lady's arm around her partner's neck, any contact between the gentleman's left hand and the body of either; fast running steps of more than two to a measure unless taken intermittently; a backward poise of the body, resulting in waist line contact between partners, instead of a forward poise, bringing contact at the chests.

HARTMAN THEATER

Monday—Al G. Field minstrels—State fair week.

The day is a happy one for all Ohio in that it ushers in the new Field production and Ohio's great state fair two events which have come to be synchronous and synonymous in the minds of all state fair visitors. The Field show again inaugurates the new theatrical season at the Hartman, a custom it has enjoyed for many years and always the week of the big fair.

Those who expect to visit the Field entertainment during their stay in Columbus are urged to make reservations at the earliest possible opportunity, as delay may mean disappointment in obtaining seats.

Edward Conard and Joseph E. Hatfield, joint owners and producers of the Al G. Field minstrels, have achieved the greatest success of the 37 splendid years that are to the credit of the organization this year. It is heralded as the very finest and most lavish, as well as ambitious show black face minstrelsy has yet attained. Previous critics are unanimous in acclaiming its unusual merit and Hartman patrons will know what to expect in view of the splendid performances given by this popular American organization in the past.

The company again includes all the old familiar and much loved faces and some new ones as well and the production is a brilliant one in every sense of the word. Manager Conard has outdone all former efforts in staging the show and it is without a doubt the most expensive minstrelsy ever known.

The company includes Jack Richards, Billy Church, Nick Hufford, Roddy Jordan, John Heely, Ed. Jones, Pete Detzel, Boni Mack, Harry Frillman, Ola Ellwood, Leslie Berry, Dolt Kastor, the Doran Brothers, Lloyd Gilbert, Carl Cameron's saxoland five and all the other familiar and popular names of the old program.

Matinee Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Woman Attacked.

Sylvan Beach, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Mrs. T. W. Edgar, wife of a New York physician noted for rejuvenation operations, is nursing a swollen jaw in Cavena hospital, and William Russell, proprietor of a hotel at which she was a guest, is out on bail, as a result of having struck her, it is said. Mrs. M. E. Lamphrey, mother of Mrs. Edgar, said the trouble started when Mrs. Edgar criticised the food at Russell's hotel. Then followed a dispute and Mrs. Edgar was ordered out.

MOVED TO CITY.

Rev. M. R. White and family, of Jackson, have moved back to this city and will occupy the residence on East Franklin street which he recently purchased from the heirs of J. P. Blacker.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE.

The 241 acre home farm of J. E. Renick will be sold on the premises next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. This is one of the best farms in Ohio and has all new, modern equipment. Appraised at $225 an acre. 22aug4w1.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

PROVES AMERICA ONCE JOINED ASIA

Asiatic Expedition Establishes Existence of Land Connection —Discovers Fossil Field.

Washington.—In a report just received from Peking, Roy Chapman Andrews, leader of the Third Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History of New York, declares the existence of a land connection between Asia and North America has unquestionably been established and hundreds of years of work will be required to exhaust the huge deposits in "one of the world's greatest fossil fields."

Beyond Their Hopes.

Mr. Andrews' letter says: "The first month of the expedition's work is far beyond our hopes. Where we expected only fragments we have discovered an immense deposit of large and small dinosaur bones. It will require many months to exhaust this region, but we have removed two partially complete skeletons and parts of several others. This includes herbivorous dinosaurs, 30 feet long, of the Iguanodon type and smaller carnivorous species. These bones are at least 5,000,000 years old, but beautifully preserved.

"They probably are related to European types, and with our former work indicate that Central Asia is the ancestral home of the dinosaurs which migrated to Europe and America.

"We have discovered a skull of a giant rhinoceros—like the beast known as the titanotherium—which, although it has been buried for 3,000,000 years, is almost as perfect as though the animal had died a week ago. The titanotheres were previously only known in America.

Deposits Full of Interest.

"We have found also remains of a giant dog-like carnivore, as well as many teeth and jaws of an ancestral tapir-like animal. We could spend easily a year's time in these great deposits, but will give them only enough time to get a few of the choicest things.

"The expedition's belief that Mongolia is one of the world's greatest fossil fields is thoroughly confirmed. It will require a hundred years of work by many expeditions to exhaust these huge deposits.

"Our original theory of a Central Asian center of dispersal of the mammalian life of Europe and America is receiving more proof every day. The existence of a land connection between Asia and North America has unquestionably been established.

"The expedition will proceed westward into the Central Gobi desert. We expect to investigate areas which we located last summer and to explore new regions south of the Altai mountains toward Chinese Turkestan and far to the west."

British Lead in Ships That Pass Suez Canal

London.—The number of ships and their net tonnage that passed through the Suez canal in 1922 totaled 4,345 and 20,745,245 respectively. The receipts amounted to 166,856,537 francs (about $10,345,105 at the present rate of exchange).

The canal company's books for 1922, just balanced, show that vessels flying the British flag headed the list, numbering 2,736, or 63 per cent, with a gross tonnage of 18,425,942. The Dutch were next with 455 vessels, or 10.5 per cent, their gross tonnage being 2,984,013. Third on the numerical list is Italy with 225 vessels, equal to 5.2 per cent, with a gross tonnage of 1,189,359, but France, with 215 vessels, or 4.9 per cent, has the higher gross tonnage of 1,466,121. The German flag was borne by 149 vessels, or 3.4 per cent, with a gross tonnage of 1,031,424.

Japanese Skipper Is Found Dead at Wheel

San Diego, Cal.—Steering erratically in a circle twenty-five miles off the harbor here, and, failing to answer hail from other craft, the Japanese fishing boat Fuso was overhauled by another Japanese boat and the skipper, O. Tomann, found dead.

Tomann, the only person aboard, was found lashed to the wheel, his body leaning to one side, which caused the Fuso to steer about in a circle, as the gasoline engine of the boat was operating full power.

Physicians declared death was due to heart trouble.

Secret Drawers Yield $7,335 in Old Bureau

Manchester, England.—A combined Sheraton bureau and bookcase, which was bought from a dealer recently by the wife of a Manchester corporation official for $100, has yielded up from secret drawers several bonds and probate of a will relating to property of the value of $7,335.

The dealer had indicated the location of two secret drawers, but investigation by the purchaser brought to light three more secret recesses.

The will is dated November, 1906, and is drawn up by Mrs. Sarah Kershaw, No. 15 Meadow street, Moss Side, Manchester. A Manchester corporation bond for $100, redeemable next month, and a Stockport corporation bond for $500 was discovered.

WILL DEVELOP HARDING PLAN

Coolidge Takes Up Merchant Marine Problem.

WANTS AN ADEQUATE FLEET

Committee to Be Named to Pass Upon the Feasibility of Pending Proposals—President Sees No Necessity For Change In Government's Policy of Nonintervention in Disputes of Europe.

Washington, Aug. 22.—President Coolidge set as one of the first major tasks of his administration the working out of a solution of the American merchant marine problem.

He made it plain that he shares the same determination, inherited from President Harding, that the nation's merchant fleet shall be adequate to its needs of commerce in peace and as an auxiliary to the navy in time of possible war.

The plan under consideration differs only slightly from that conceived during the regime of Albert D. Lasker as chairman of the shipping board and approved by the late president, after the senate had killed the subsidy bill. It is proposed to take the government's ships out of the hands of private operators, who have been enjoying guaranteed commissions regardless of profit or loss to the government, and place them in charge of corporations formed by the government. These subsidiary corporations would be under the direct management of salaried officers, who, in turn, would be under the supervision of the shipping board. The shipping board, under the proposed plan, would act as the parent or holding concern.

The president's ideas for perfecting the system embody the first step in his announced desire to develop a sympathetic and co-operative working agreement between the executive department of the government and the two houses of congress.

It is proposed to form a committee, consisting of the chairman of the shipping board, the attorney general, secretaries of the treasury and commerce, chairmen of the senate commerce committee and house merchant marine committee, which have jurisdiction over shipping legislation and others, to pass on the feasibility of the pending proposals.

President Coolidge is convinced that the United States has followed a wise policy in avoiding entanglement in the controversies of Europe, it was learned authoritatively at the White House. Reports made to the president by cabinet officers and senators returning from abroad are interpreted as confirming the wisdom of that policy.

Nothing has been revealed, Mr. Coolidge feels, that points toward any necessity for change in the policy of nonintervention which has been followed by the American government.

Those who have visited Europe, in the president's opinion, have returned with a more acute realization of conditions there. Impressed by the bitterness and hatreds of the old world, they see all the more plainly that there is nothing for the American government to do at this time except to follow the course already mapped out.

'SUBMARINE FOUNDERS

Eighty-four Japanese Drowned When Vessel Fills With Water.

Tokyo, Aug. 22.—Eighty-five Japanese were drowned when a submarine of the "seventy type" filled with water and went down at the Kawasaki dock yards, near Kobe. The submarine, which was just completed, was on a trial trip and carried 40 seamen, two officers and 48 workmen from the dockyards. It first disappeared at 9 o'clock, but reappeared. At 2 o'clock rough seas made it impossible to save the craft and it disappeared again beneath the waters. Five men, including the captain, were saved.

Indianapolis, Aug. 22.—All they had to do at Sam Meko's "filling station" was to "drive in and fill up." However, the explosive fuel purveyed by Mr. Meko is not gasoline at all. Police say it is real "100 proof." Police who raided Sam's soft drink parlor say the contraption they found was the height of efficiency. So efficient that they have turned it over to federal authorities for careful examination. It consisted of an underground tank with an air pump attached. When air was forced in the liquor siphoned forth at a handy spot.

8,000,000 TO THE DOLLAR

Collapse of Mark a Blow to the New German Government.

Berlin, Aug. 22.—The collapse of the mark in New York was an unexpected blow for the government. The reichsbank intervened in the market strongly and held the dollar rate to 5,500,000 marks, but the rate reached 8,000,000 to the dollar after the exchange closed.

The cabinet will issue an ordinance requiring exporters to make affidavit as to the amount of foreign currencies in their possession, and they will be required to sell a stated percentage of these to the government for paper marks at the official rate, the proceeds to be usable for buying food. The shortage in all fats is more acute. Thousands of families are unable to pay the new gas rates and work in many industrial sections has been curtailed by the stoppage of electrical and gas works.

Search For Baby McKenzie.

New York, Aug. 22.—The search for Baby McKenzie has taken on a nation-wide scope. Wireless descriptions and circulars were sent out to thousands of points in the United States and Canada. The mother of the baby is recovering from a hysterical collapse when the reports of more than 160 detectives searching for the lost child gave her hope of its immediate return. Peter McKenzie went back and forth between his home and the police station seeking eagerly for the faintest hope for his little girl's return.

Premier Poincare Replies to Recent British Note.

BALDWIN PROPOSAL REJECTED

French Maintain That Invasion of the Ruhr Is Not the Cause of Germany's Financial Plight—Plan For International Commission Not Accepted—No Progress Made Toward Settlement.

Paris, Aug. 22.—The French reparations note, according to a most reliable diplomatic source, though courteous in tone, does not reveal that any appreciable progress has been made toward a settlement of pending disputes or problems.

Premier Poincare maintains that the invasion of the Ruhr is not the cause of Germany's financial plight, which, he insists, is occasioned by Germany's determination not to pay. He rejects the plan for an international commission to inquire into Germany's capacity to pay, and refuses to enter into any negotiations with Germany until passive resistance ceases in the Ruhr. He declares France will not evacuate the Ruhr until the last gold mark is paid on the reparations account. He concludes by saying that the debts of France to America and Britain are in a "different category, both from the point of view of justice and morality," from those of Germany, and can not be paid until Germany reimburses France.

Whether the British government will decide to reply separately to Germany is not known to Paris, but precautions have been taken here to be ready for the calling of an extra session of the chamber of deputies and the senate should Prime Minister Baldwin decide upon such a step. It was stated in the best informed quarters that it is Poincare's intention to lay the entire situation before parliament and to ask its approval of a series of new measures, the first whereof would be the occupation of Frankfurt, should the British take separate action.

Backed by parliamentary approval the French government then would declare the British action tantamount to a repudiation of the treaty of Versailles, which would leave France free to solve by its own means both the problems of reparations and security from future invasion from the east.

M'ADOO AT ISSUE WITH HENRY FORD

Declares There's No Truth in Motor Magnate's Charge.

Los Angeles, Aug. 22.—"Not a word of truth in it," is the way William G. McAdoo here replied to Henry Ford's recent charge that, as executive head of the rail transportation system of the country during the war, McAdoo fell under the influence of "the exploiters, who didn't want efficiency."

McAdoo's denial is in the form of a letter to Frank J. Taylor of Washington, and given out here, and the letter itself is a sequel to a recent interview with the Detroit manufacturer and published in the Christian Science Monitor of July 23.

As quoted in the interview, Mr. Ford said: "When the government took over the railroads and put Mr. McAdoo at the head of them, I happened to be in Washington. Mr. McAdoo told me something of the situation of the railroads and asked me to tell him what I would do about getting the engines and cars repaired and in running order. I and my men had worked out a little plan for shoving the locomotives along and getting them in running order as quickly as possible. Mr. McAdoo was interested and asked me to work out the details of the plan and to bring them to him the next time I was in Washington. I set my men to work and brought the plan back the next week. But Mr. McAdoo would not see me. The exploiters had got him in the meantime. They called him off. They didn't want efficiency."

To all of which Mr. Adoo has this to say: "There is not a word of truth in the Ford statement as far as I am concerned. It is pure imagination."

DR. ABRAHAM SIMON

President of Central Conference of American Rabbis.

I telegraphed Mr. Ford July 25 asking him to kindly tell me the time when and the place where he claims he talked to me about repairing engines and cars. But I can not get a word out of him."

Firpo to Fight Willis.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Police Chief Apologizes.

Springfield, O., Aug. 22.—Chief of Police R. E. O'Brien has apologized to Springfield patriotic organizations as a result of the American flag and bibles having been taken into the jail several weeks ago when 72 klansmen were placed under arrest. The patriotic organizations announced through Edward James, chairman, and S. R. Nalle of the disabled war veterans, that the apology would be accepted.

Insurance Plan Abandoned.

Cleveland, Aug. 22.—Abandonment of an insurance branch, established 20 years ago, has been approved by the Foresters of America at a session of the organization's national convention here. The convention voted to eliminate the insurance department, but will pay up, at face value, all outstanding policies upon the death of the policy holders. No premiums will be paid after 1923.

Minister Accused.

Dayton, O., Aug. 22.—Marshal W. E. Graham of Franklin, O., is reported to have asked authorities in California to arrest Rev. F. W. Gordon, pastor, formerly of Franklin. Gordon is alleged to have left Franklin suddenly, owing banks and business houses $8,000. He is said to have been seen in southern California.

Girl Mayor Quits.

Fairport, O., Aug. 22.—Amy Kaunonen, girl mayor of this village, has cleared up official business and is ready to depart Friday for Seattle, Wash., where she has accepted a position. Frank Harris, president of the council, has taken over the office.

Motorist Killed.

Springfield, O., Aug. 22.—Charles A. Murphy, 22, of Springfield, was killed when the auto in which he and three other men were riding skidded at a sharp turn near here and tumbled. The three others received minor injuries.

Woman Dies of Burns.

Cleveland, Aug. 22.—Mrs. Helen Ciesak, 32, mother of five small children, died in St. Alexis' hospital from burns sustained when her clothing became ignited as she was lighting a hot water tank in her home here.

Whisky Stored Under Name of Soap. Cincinnati, Aug. 22.—Twenty-year-old whisky, worth $25,000, stored under the name of "soap," was confiscated at the old Anheuser-Busch warehouse here. The "soap" filled 760 gallon cans.

Put Up to Voter.

Springfield, O., Aug. 22.—County commissioners decided to place the proposal for a new $350,000 tuberculosis hospital before the voters this fall.

Newspaper Sold.

Springfield, O., Aug. 22.—The Mechanicsburg News-Item, a weekly paper published by Ora Shaw for the past 25 years, has been sold to E. J. Newell of Jackson, O.

MINERS DENIED WAGE INCREASE

Lewis Sees Strike Unless the Operators Yield.

CONFERENCE AGAIN BREAKS UP

Further Intervention by the Government Believed Necessary If Suspension Is to Be Averted in the Anthracite Field—Next Forty-eight Hours Expected to Bring the Situation to a Head.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 22.—Further intervention by the United States government is necessary if the country is to be spared the hardship of a strike in the anthracite coal fields Sept. 1.

For the second time within less than a month the anthracite wage conference broke up, splitting on the refusal of the operators to grant an increase in pay to the miners. John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, declared that unless the operators recede from their position the men in the anthracite field would quit mining coal Aug. 31.

The break came with a suddenness that surprised all observers and literally stunned the operators, who sought vainly to hold the machinery of negotiations intact at least until word could be had from Washington.

Samuel D. Warriner, head of the operators' general policy committee, told the miners that they would not receive wage increases above the present scale, which he offered to renew until April 1, 1925. W. J. Richards, speaking for the operators, moved that a report of the present status be made to the United States coal commission and that the conference adjourn to meet again later. The miners voted solidly against the motion. After a long parley Mr. Richards finally moved that the conference adjourn "to the call of the secretary" at the request of either side, and this motion was adopted.

This action leaves the negotiations in the same parliamentary status as that of July 27, when the first break came on the check-off and when the intervention of the coal commission was necessary to bring the operators and miners back together.

If it appears inevitable that a suspension must come the government is prepared to meet the situation by diverting sufficient quantities of bituminous coal and coke suitable for anthracite substitutes into the anthracite consuming territory to prevent suffering and to take other measures to safeguard the welfare of the people. The next 48 hours is expected to bring the situation to a head.

"The mine workers are not making any requests of the coal commission," Lewis said. "We are not pleading with the coal commission or any other agency to assist us in defeating the anthracite operators in any contest."

Coal Commission to Fix Responsibility For the Break.

Washington, Aug. 22.—President Coolidge will await a report from the United States coal commission fixing responsibility for the breaking up of the anthracite joint wage conference at Atlantic City before disclosing his course of action. This was indicated at the white house following the executive's second conference with Chairman John Hays Hammond of the commission since the Atlantic City conference adjourned. The filing of the report, Chairman Hammond stated, would be the commission's next move. It will be in the president's hands in a day or two. The operators' and miners' committees in the meantime will have an opportunity to resume their negotiations voluntarily, if they see fit to do so. The commission, however, has no intention of asking them to meet again, Chairman Hammond said.

NEWS BRIEFS

Colonel William S. Scott of the quartermaster corps of the United States army, stationed at Omaha, Neb., with the Seventh corps area, died suddenly at Omaha.

Two persons were killed and two seriously injured when the Pittsburgh flyer crashed into a light coupe at a crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad at Dunkirk, N. Y. The dead: Herbert Roloff, 21, Fredonia; Miss Martha Rostowski, 17, Dunkirk.

FOR PRISONERS

Correspondence Schools to Be Established in Forty-five States.

Columbus, Aug. 22.—Plans for the establishment of intra-wall correspondence schools in every state and federal prison in the United States have just been completed by Napoleon Hill, editor of the Napoleon Hill Golden Rule magazine, and Chaplain T. O. Reed of the Ohio state penitentiary, and organization work relative to the establishment of this educational program of gigantic scope is to be begun immediately. Headquarters will be established in this city. An alliance has already been formed of the wardens and chaplains of every state and federal institution in the country to push this work forward at the greatest possible speed, Mr. Hill announced. It was also stated that governors in 45 states of the Union had already given their enthusiastic backing to the program.

No Offices For Klansmen.

Washington, Aug. 22.—Following a conference with President Coolidge, R. B. Creager, Republican state chairman of Texas, announced that no person known to be a member of the Ku Klux Klan will be endorsed for any federal office in Texas. Mr. Creager added that the Republicans will have a complete ticket in the field this November and will wage the most vigorous campaign in the history of the state.

Hughes' Suggestion Approved.

Washington, Aug. 22.—With recognition of Mexico assured, the state department is working out the process by which diplomatic intercourse would be resumed. President Coolidge approved the suggestion of Secretary Hughes that, pending the reconvening of congress in December, the respective governments of Washington and Mexico City should be represented by a charge d'affaires.

Mail on Steamer Burns.

Tokyo, Aug. 22.—Fire which broke out on board the Admiral line steamer President Grant at Kake has been extinguished. Eight hundred bags of mail for Shanghai and Hongkong was destroyed and damage to the cargo has been estimated at approximately $50,000. The sailing of the President Grant on its return voyage to Seattle has been tentatively set for Aug. 23.

Mathey and Richards Defeated.

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 22.—Manuel Alonzo, the sensational Spanish Davis cup player, and Wallace F. Johnson, hero of many tennis court battles, won the right to enter the third round of the national doubles championship here on the splendid turf courts of the Longwood Cricket club, by defeating Dean Mathey and Vincent Richards by 9-7, 6-2, 6-8, 7-5.

Poland to Get Loan Here.

Copenhagen, Aug. 22.—Poland is to get a $100,000,000 loan from America in place of the 400,000,000 franc loan which was being negotiated in Paris but which broke down owing to conditions imposed by France. The loan is for a short term and is to be used in conjunction with an additional sum of $50,000,000 contributed by the government, to reform the currency.

Shortest Railroad.
You have heard of shortest railroads before. Always they're the most abbreviated ever. But off-hand one would grant the prize to Missoula, Mont. It has a railroad only 100 feet long. It connects the Northern Pacific with the C. M. & St. P., and is used as a transfer. It has no equipment, no employees, and no stations, yet the company that owns it gets 50 cents for every car that passes over its rails. Sixteen thousand have done so thus far. IS GOOD PROVERB

Wise Advice From Persia as to Choosing Friends.

Two to Avoid Are the "Candid" Person and the One Who Is Too Easily Offended.

An old Persian proverb runs, "Think twice before you make an enemy, and thrice before you make a friend." True—even if we think that "twice" and "thrice" should be transposed. As a matter of fact, however, they are in their right places.

Most of us, before experience teaches us wisdom, take to ourselves friends far too easily. We continue the friendship because we don't quite know how to end it; but in our hearts we wish certain of our "friends" a thousand miles away—permanently!

There's the painfully "candid friend," for a start. He—or she—tells us of our faults, our defects, our shortcomings, and rubs in hard all the things we know, but would like to forget!

"I'm sure no one would tell you but myself, old man, but do you know you are getting fat?"

Or when a new hat appears—"My dear, I know you don't mind what I say, but it doesn't suit you a bit! It would be all right for a girl of sixteen, but—"

Had I my time over again I would never have one of these candid friends, says a writer in London Answers. I've searched my memory and cannot remember when candid praise was given. It is always criticism. Candid friends are life-spoilers. Keep them out of your life.

Then there's the easily offended friend! Never have a friend of that type. Or if you have any, seize the first opportunity of letting them go out of your life. They will age you, worry you, and make a slave of you if they remain. You will always be apologizing, explaining, smoothing them down, begging their pardons. Your soul will be free to do what you like. They might be "offended!"

They are tyrants, and their tyranny grows worse the more you pander to their "touchiness." Get rid of them! Buy—as I did—a new hat, and tell them nothing about it. They are sure to be "offended," and then let them remain so.

Finally, there's the "friend" who uses you when her real friend isn't available. "Uses" is the right word! You are in reserve—to be used as required. That type should be barred, too.

Choose your friends carefully!

Book Agents' Best Field.

When Mrs. Smith moved out into a sparsely settled section of Brooklyn she thought one advantage of her location would be freedom from agents. But she was mistaken; they came thicker than ever.

First appeared the milk company solicitors, then book and magazine agents, mop and brush men, charity solicitors and then the vacuum cleaner agents. The vacuum men seemed to come in relays or waves. Mrs. Smith already had a patent sweeper, but she was always forced to answer the doorbell and say no to the agents, says the New York Sun and Globe.

Seeing her hopes of quiet and isolation of life in the suburbs blasted, Mrs. Smith the other day asked one of the agents why she was visited by so many salesmen.

"Oh," said he, "agents always make a specialty of thinly populated districts. We figure you folks out here don't have many of the latest things. It's our best field."

Eyes Only on One Side of Head.

Both eyes on the same side of the head is the "freak" distinction of flounders and soles. In these species of fish the head is unsymmetrically formed, the cranium being badly twisted in form. The body is strongly compressed, and the side in which the eyes are located is uppermost in all the actions of the fish. This upper side, be it right or left, is colored, while the eyeless side is white, or nearly so. The body of the real young flounder rests upright in the water, a fact well known to students of the finny tribes. As the flounder grows older there is a tendency to turn to one side, and the lower eye begins its migration to the other side. The movement of the eye in the tropical species is easily followed, as this genus reached a larger size than do most flounders before this change takes place. The larva is symmetrical, and in all cases transparent.

Selecting Talent.

The director went out on the lot and bawled for a fat actress. They sent him a fat actress.

"Have you a fur coat?" he asked.

"Yes," she replied.

"I'll rent it from you for $10 a day," said the director.

He then bawled for a fatter actress and went through the same line of conversation with her.

"What in heck are you driving at?" demanded the general manager.

"We're filming a big Alaska scene tomorrow. Our lovely heroine will wear three fur coats—her own, which fits her, and two on top of that."

Hard Luck.

Our pet peeve is this: After having spent one dull, lonesome week of our vacation at a farmhouse, to have two "peaches" arrive there on the very same train we are taking back home.—Boston Transcript.

Will Not Laugh in Captivity.

Some of us who have been fortunate enough to get a glimpse of a properly stocked zoological garden have seen the laughing jackass, and with one accord we have all wondered why he is so called. In captivity he does not laugh, nor even smile, and there is little or no resemblance, that we can trace, to our friend the jackass. The fact is that he is found in Australia and he laughs at his best only when at liberty in his habitat, and then he laughs vociferously in the morning and evening. His laugh is a loud, raucous noise, much like a mocking laugh, but hideous in the extreme. A family of these birds happening to locate near one's home will pretty nigh drive the humans to desperation. They are extremely curious and will spend hours watching humans at work. They are also attracted by the music of a church and will haunt such localities during service, every once in a while lending their aid with their terrific "laugh."

Native Arts of the Aztecs.

Since the great conquests of Peru and Mexico and the lesser expeditions into Central America and our Southwest, all objects made by the natives are more than likely to have a divided, artistic origin. In museums very careful distinction is made between pre-Columbian and post-Columbian arts. This is in no sense proof of inferiority of native creative power, but rather indicates the high status of all aesthetic expression in these favored regions since artisanship had arisen to a point where adaptation of exotic ideas was within the scope of both mental and physical powers. Only people dominated by iron superstitions in regard to the significance of design remain unaffected through contact. Only peoples lacking in technical skill refuse to copy.—M. D. C. Crawford in Arts and Decorations.

When a Man Is at His Prime.

From twenty-eight to forty-nine for the average man. Long ago a man was considered at his strongest and most beautiful between twenty and thirty, at his best as a leader or manager from thirty to forty, as an experienced man of business from forty to fifty, and as a counselor or judge of other men's troubles from fifty to sixty. Roughly these divisions are to some extent still correct. Modern life, however, with its increased opportunities for travel and education, has so speeded up conditions that young men of business and politics have by the twenties often acquired enough experience to allow them to rise to their prime early in life. At the other end of life, altered social conditions and better medical attention have allowed physical efficiency to be retained far longer.

Pigeon Finds Way by Sight.

A British royal air force pigeon, released from a balloon a mile and a half above the ground, was unable to see the earth below on account of a thick blanket of clouds. After flying around for a little time the bird gave up all hope of finding its way back to its home, some 150 miles away, and settled down comfortably on the balloon, much as Noah's dove settled on the ark when it could find no place to rest on account of the waters. The pigeon, however, had better luck than Noah's dove. After a time a rift appeared in the clouds, and the bird swooped from the balloon through the gap in the vapor, and two hours later had delivered the message tied to its leg. This incident indicates that a pigeon finds its way home by sight, not by instinct, as many have thought.

New Edible Plant.

A plant that belongs to the lettuce family and that is now cultivated in upper Egypt and can be grown with profit in certain parts of the Sudan is a new source of edible oil. The seed yields under pressure from 37 to 38 per cent of oil and certain specimens of fresh seed from the Sudan, which contained less than 4 per cent of water, yield more than 44 per cent. The oil is odorless, of a light yellow color and without a disagreeable taste. The seed is so small that it cannot be handled with ordinary equipment, but the oil product is so valuable that new machinery will no doubt be built to do the work.

Self-Mastery.

The greatest victory you can gain is to master yourself. Swami Paramananda writes: "The thirst for happiness is a common instinct in all mankind; but every one of us does not possess the secret of acquiring it, nor have we the power to retain it when it comes to us. This requires both wisdom and endurance. Perhaps for this reason the great men of all countries and ages have laid such tremendous emphasis on a life of self-discipline and self-control. Self-discipline enables us to organize and unite all our scattered forces. This necessarily increases our power for both thought and action."

Deaf Feel Sound.

Deaf people can be terribly startled by sounds. Owing to lack of hearing, the sense of feeling becomes highly developed, and some kinds of noises they "hear" with their whole persons. The chest, in particular, acts as a sounding-board for the reception and exaggeration of explosive sounds for its owner's annoyance. A slamming door, unexpected firing, or train whistle, can be no more startling to anyone with the use of his ears than to sensitive deaf people who may chance to be where the vibration of such sounds can reach them without interruption.

HOOSIER
—the Kitchen Cabinet that saves miles of steps

—the Only Kitchen Convenience that Adjusts Your Work-Table to Suit Your Height

Gymnasium instructors have a little trick of asking new members of their classes to hold their hands above their heads and open and close their fingers. After a minute or two the student usually suffers an acute pain in the muscles. Yet opening and closing the fingers is a simple, natural operation. It's the unnatural position in which the arms are held which wears one out.

Unless your work-table is adjusted to the proper height to suit your individual build, you stand in an unnatural position which puts a muscle strain on arms and back for such movements as rolling dough and beating eggs.

That is why so many women wear themselves out at their kitchen work. It is also why women who own the new HOOSIER are freed from such muscle-strains. For the new HOOSIER gives you a work-table adjusted to your comfort.

An initial payment as low as $1.00 will put a HOOSIER in your home.

ANCIENT CULTURE IN BURIED CITY

Tale of How Mongolian Town
Fell After Siege.

In the deserts of Mongolia, far away from cities and civilization, a rumor originated some years ago of a dead city, abandoned by its inhabitants for centuries and buried ever more deeply beneath shifting sands. The rumor was difficult to verify. Few explorers penetrated into this wild and desolate country. Finally, in 1907, a Russian scientific expedition, led by Professor Kozlov, set out with the purpose of searching for the city. The task was difficult because the nomadic tribes in the region were suspicious of strangers and slow to give information.

Kozlov worked with tact and patience. He employed a Mongolian familiar with the native language to go about disguised as a merchant in an effort to get some hint of the city's location. But the Mongolian was suspected as an agent of the foreigners and for a long time could obtain no information. Finally he was compelled during a storm to camp near the city itself, without being aware of it. The natives regarded this as a sign of divine intervention and made no further difficulties about guiding him to the ruins. This was how the dead city of Kara-Khoto became known to the outside world.

Buried in Sand.
When the Russian exploring party approached Kara-Khoto with their Mongolian guide they were compelled to plow through sand drifts 15 feet deep. It was this sand, together with the arid climate of Mongolia, that had preserved the city's walls and monuments over a period of many centuries. The neighboring tribesmen, who had settled near the city ten generations before, declared that it always had been there as far back as their records reached.

The streets and houses of Kara-Khoto have been largely obliterated by waves of sand. But Kozlov's party found many interesting memorials in this Mongolian Pompeii. There were the remains of Buddhist temples and Mohammedan mosques. There were packages of Chinese paper money, bearing grim inscriptions threatening counterfeiters with the loss of their heads. There were silver ornaments and money, carefully hidden away by the original owners.

The most important discovery of all was a cone-shaped monument outside the city walls. In this monument was a library of 2,000 books, written in seven Eastern languages. Several other things found in and about the city helped to piece out the legend about the fate of the tribe which formerly lived there. In the Thirteenth and Fourteenth centuries, so the legend ran, the Chinese had sent out an army to capture Kara-Khoto. For several years they besieged the city in vain. Then a Chinese engineer conceived the idea of cutting off the water supply. He blocked up with sandbags the river which formerly flowed through the city and turned its course in a different direction. The people, desperate with thirst, dug a deep well inside the walls, but failed to get enough water to sustain life. Then the population buried all its treasures. The chief of the tribe killed his wife and daughter with his own hand and ordered a mass sortie through a breach in the wall. The doomed tribe rushed out, only to be slaughtered in the open by the superior forces of the Chinese.

Traces Bear Out Legend.
This grim legend was borne out by discoveries of the explorers. They found that a nearby river had been artificially diverted from its channel. And the wall of the city had a large breach, through which the last desperate sortie might well have been made.

The Russians found in the monument many signs of high culture on the part of the former inhabitants. There were books in Persian, Arabic and Hindoo script, as well as volumes in Mongolian and Chinese. There was a collection of more than three hundred sacred Buddhist pictures, painted on backgrounds of cloth and silk. There were many statues of Buddhist gods and goddesses. Traces of former canals were found in the city.

After thoroughly exploring Kara-Khoto and its surroundings, Kozlov buried the less portable treasures and set out to discover Kookoonor, a lake in the vicinity which it was said no white man had ever seen, although French and German explorers had tried to reach it. The nomads who lived about the lake made every effort to prevent the travelers from launching a boat on it. They declared that the waters of Kookoonor were under a mysterious spell, that every boat would be irresistibly drawn to the bottom.

Notwithstanding these warnings, some of the members of the party embarked. They were caught in a heavy storm the first night, and the natives were certain that the wrath of the gods had been aroused. But the boat weathered the storm safely; and a skyrocket announced the arrival of the party on the other side, to the relief of Kozlov and the amazement of the Mongolians, who had never seen anything of the kind before.

Wild Buddhist Monks.
On the other side of the lake the Russians found three Buddhist monks, wild men with shaggy, matted hair and beards that had never been shaved. They were in great fear at first sight of the strangers. Later two of them proved accessible, but the third remained obstinately savage, refusing to say a word.

Lake Kookoonor did not mark the end of the expedition's adventures. Penetrating into the mountains of northern Tibet, the party encountered a band of mounted robbers, who attacked them with swarms of arrows. These were no match for the firearms of the Russians and the robbers were beaten off.

The story of these explorations was recently told by Professor Kozlov before a large and interested audience in the Moscow Polytechnical institute. The lecture was illustrated with motion-picture views; and a map of Mongolia, showing the location of the buried city and the route of the expedition, hung on a blackboard behind the speaker's stage. Kozlov, an erect, soldierly figure, with deep-set, piercing eyes, confined himself chiefly to the narrative of his past experiences, touching only briefly on the prospects of a new exploring expedition which he is planning to lead into Mongolia and Tibet. He spoke in more detail on the latter subject in a personal interview with the writer.

The new exploring party is to be made up of seventeen Russians and four Mongolians. Leaving Petrograd it will proceed by rail to eastern Siberia. From there the route turns south, to Urga, the capital of Mongolia. The expedition is planned for three years. The first year will be spent in Mongolia, the second in Tibet, and the third will be devoted to the homeward journey, which may be through India or Chinese Turkestan.

Two Women on Trip.
"The purposes of the expedition," said Professor Kozlov, "are purely scientific."

"One novel feature of this expedition is the fact that two women will be included in the party. My wife, who once rode through Mongolia on horseback and who knows how to handle a rifle, will accompany the expedition as an ethnologist and zoologist. She is acquainted with the Tibetan language and will study the customs of Tibetan and Mongolian women. The other woman in the party, a friend of my wife, is a doctor and natural scientist. She expects to collect butterflies and other insect specimens."—New York Times.

AMERICAN WAR HEROINE IS MARRIED IN TURKEY

A romance which began in the American hospital at Stamboul, has culminated in the marriage of Dr. Hal-owell Davis of Brookline, Mass., and Miss Pauline Allen of Boston, Mass., a Near East Relief worker in Constantinople for the last two years. She took a thrilling part in a fire in a building sheltering 600 Greeks. She directed the rescue work. She was highly praised in dispatches.

CULT WOULD CENSOR DRESS

Greek Zealots Attack "Immodest" Feminine Attire.
Fashionable women in Athens, Greece, and foreign women who follow the modern trend in dress, are being terrorized by the violent activities of a local organization which terms itself "the zealots of Christ."

The members of this association have taken a vow to compel modesty in women's dress by force. Women wearing low-necked gowns or going about with bare arms are often roughly handled, and the exposed parts of their persons are smeared with tar.

In several cases recently the male escorts of women thus attacked have given the roughs some very severe beatings, but nevertheless the systematic campaign of molestation goes on.

Never Touched His Fortune.
Insane for 50 years, during which time a committee handled all his affairs, Ferdinand Suydam died at New York city, a millionaire. In 1874 Suydam inherited $50,000; in 1923 the estate had reached a million. Suydam was adjudged incompetent when he obtained the heritage.

Co-Operative Drying Plants Are Favored

Found Successful in Increasing Profit From Orchard.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Community fruit-drying plants have been found to be a successful means of increasing the orchard profits of the small growers who have a surplus which they are unable to market in any other way, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, if the total quantity of such surplus in a community is sufficient to justify the necessary expense. The organization of such a co-operative plant should be governed by the same fundamental rules that have been found necessary in the development of other co-operative ventures.

It must first be definitely ascertained whether the quantity of unused fruit is actually such as will make the establishment of an evaporating or drying plant profitable. This information can only be obtained by a careful canvass of the district and a tabulation of the results. The making of such a canvass is a task calling for conservatism and the exercise of good judgment, for the reason that unintentional but gross overstatement of the unmarketed and unused portion of the fruit which could be used as evaporator stock is the rule rather than the exception. It must be borne in mind that in the case of apples, only mature, reasonably sound fruit of fair size will make a marketable dry product and that estimates which include premature drops, speckled and decayed fruits, and small-sized cider apples are worse than useless because misleading. The canvass should take into account all fruits grown in the district, the location of the center of supply, the length of time over which the ripening of each will extend, and the maximum quantity per day which the plant will be required to handle.

With this data in hand it will be possible to determine the size and type of evaporator needed. As the fruits will in most cases be varied the plant should be of a general-purpose type, so constructed that it will handle equally well all materials, such as apples, peaches, plums and prunes.

Check Cucumber Beetle by Using Dust Mixture

One of the best methods of controlling the cucumber beetle, according to Carl J. Drake, state entomologist at Iowa State college, is to dust the young plants with a mixture of one part of calcium arsenate and 20 parts of gypsum.

The dust can be applied with a shaker made by punching holes in the bottom of a half-gallon tin can with an eight-penny nail. The first application should be made immediately after the young plants break through the ground. After that the plants should be dusted either early in the morning or late in the evening from two to three times per week and following rains.

Usually from 10 to 12 applications per season are all that are required, although more are necessary in the case of exceptionally severe attacks by the beetles. If these directions are followed rather closely, there will be no trouble in controlling the cucumber beetle.

Destructive Qualities of Heavy Motortrucks

Miles and miles of ribbonlike roads are the hope of every motorist, and when speaking of motorists these days it touches almost every home in the country. But, though the road builders lay them smooth, they seemed to have so far been unable to cope with the destructive qualities of heavy motortrucks now used to a large extent in commercial transportation on smooth surfaces.

Millions of dollars have been spent and are being spent annually for the extension to all parts of the country of good roads, in answer to the demands of the people for easy internal means of communication by way of the motorcar. Long-distance touring shows a yearly increase, and motortruck transportation is increasing.

Sudden Change in Milk Checks Laying of Flock

Many people who feed milk in some form to their laying flock regularly have been obliged to learn one thing about the feeding. A sudden change from sweet milk one day to sour the next, or back again, causes digestive troubles as a rule, and either checks the laying of the flock or upsets the feeding rations so that the milk grain feed varies from day to day. Buttermilk, skimmed milk, sour or curd or sweet milk are all desirable feeds for chickens, but they should be fairly regular feeds, or fed in small amounts, if a change is necessary.

Corn for Silage Must Be Cut Fine and Packed

Corn for silage must be cut fine and tramped well in the silo if it is desired to make the best quality of feed and fill the silo to its greatest capacity, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The usual length of cutting varies from one-fourth of an inch to one inch, but the latter is a little too long, as the pieces do not pack so readily in the silo, and they are not so completely consumed in feeding as the shorter lengths.

CENSUS FIGURES SHOW INCREASE IN DIVORCES

Ratio Compared With Marriages Up 50 Per Cent in Six Years.

Washington.—A sharp increase in the last six years in the ratio of divorces to marriages is disclosed in preliminary reports for 1922, announced by the census bureau. Computation is made for half a dozen northeastern states, the first for which figures have been completed in a nation-wide survey.

The 1922 ratio was almost half again as large as it was in 1916, there having been almost 9.3 divorces to each 100 marriages in 1922, compared with almost 6.3 in 1916.

Analysis of the statistics for the six states shows the number of marriages in 1922 were one-eighth less than in 1916, while the number of divorces was almost one-third more. The states covered in the report were New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey and Delaware.

Marriages in these states in 1922 numbered 80,883, as compared with 92,531 in 1916, and divorces 7,513, compared with 5,793. There was a decrease of 11,648 marriages in the states, or about 12½ per cent, while divorces increased 1,720 in number, or almost 30 per cent.

There was an increase in the number of marriages in only one of the six states—New Hampshire. There was a decrease in the number of divorces in Vermont, but the ratio of divorces to the number of marriages showed an increase in that state as it did in the other five states in which divorces increased in number.

Reds Printing Millions of "Propaganda" Books

Bucharest.—Figures received here summarizing the activities of the publishing business in Russia, which is purely an enterprise of the soviet state, indicate that a great effort is being made to convince the Russian people of the correctness of Bolshevik political, social and economic theories.

The soviet publishing house issued from its presses in Moscow and put into circulation throughout Russia during the last 12 months no less than 14,500,000 volumes covering the field of economics, politics, history and even fiction.

Aside from the obvious propaganda tendencies of the volumes on political and economic subjects, the soviet historians have sought to show how the world has suffered because of its hostility to Bolshevik doctrines, and in many of the fiction volumes the endeavor has been to prove that opposition to soviet doctrines has warped, limited or distorted individual lives.

Hasty Conclusion Loses Paris Doctor Fat Fee

Paris.—A Paris surgeon is telling a good story on himself. He was called in to operate on an American woman for appendicitis, and when the cure was complete the patient, seeking to show her gratitude in some way that was not too commonplace, embroidered a cigar case and took it to the surgeon.

Unfortunately the surgeon had just had a run of patients who had paid for his services by presents of little intrinsic value, so he could not help saying, "No, really, madam, take away such rubbish; a 1,000-franc note would be much more acceptable."

"All right," said the American woman, and opening the cigar case she drew a 1,000-franc bill from it, laid it on the table, and said coolly, "There were five others like it in the case."

Old Sailing Vessels Puzzle Modern Mariners

Norfolk, Va.—The reappearance of the Leviathan on the high seas caused many an "old salt" to reflect on the passing of the American sailing ship which has now virtually disappeared. The modern mariner, however, knows as little about the old-time sailing vessels as the flapper knows about her great-grandmother's spinning wheel.

The sailors at their seagoing school here are familiar with nautical terms and can quote the nomenclature of a modern oil-burner from bow to stern. But when an examiner asked them to name the seven masts of a sailing vessel, only a few could recall the names offhand.

Fore, main, mizzen, pusher, driver, jigger and spanker are the names in order, running fore and aft, of a seven-masted ship. Some authorities give them the names of forestcastle, fore, main, mizzen, jigger, spanker or driver and after masts. Others compromise by naming them from bow to stern after the days of the week, beginning with Sunday.

Child Marriages Many but Few Endure Long

Child marriages in the United States are increasing at an alarming rate.

Statistics show that 15,000 boys and 1,200 girls less than 15 years old are married. The average life of infant marriages is only a few years, and more often a few months, according to Professor A. N. Farmer of Des Moines, Ia.

Plan of Operation Fails.

A young man entered the office of a loan company here and asked to borrow $37.50. When asked what security he could give he said:

"I haven't any now, but I'll have some as soon as I get the $37.50," he replied.

When asked what he wished to do with the money, he said:

"Want to buy an automobile."
"Cars are getting cheap," said the agent, "but you can't get one for $37.50, can you?"

"Nope," said the young man, "but I've got $12.50, and with the $37.50 I get from you I'll have $50, and that'll be my first payment, see," he said cheerfully.

"But what security will we have," continued the agent, "if you buy the car on payments?"

"Why, I'll give you a mortgage on the car as soon as I get it," he said. "That would only be a second mortgage," said the agent, "as the automobile company will hold a chattel mortgage on the automobile until it is paid for."

"Well, I didn't know that," said the youth, "I guess I'm out o' luck."

Film-flam.

It isn't often that the movie folks break into this column, for the simple reason that some folks might think they were getting undue publicity, but here is a laugh or two that earns a place:

"The reason so many of us fail to recognize opportunity," says Martha Mattox, "is because it usually goes around disguised as hard work."

Whereupon Helen Ferguson comes back with a bit of philosophy of her own, to-wit:

"For the first year, love takes the bride to her husband's office; after that, suspicion does it."

All of which has nothing to do with the newspaper headline that science had proved that men talk more in their sleep than women.

When Monty Banks read this in one of the Los Angeles papers he remarked:

"A man ought to have a chance to do some talking around his own home some time, without being interrupted, corrected or shut up."

"All Comforts of Home" Plus.

An interesting comparison between the old-time "windjammer" that consumed months in crossing the ocean, and the last word in transport luxury, the Leviathan, may be made in reading a description of the latter. Besides great speed and passenger capacity, the giant ship contains a ballroom, dining rooms, smoking rooms, tea rooms, swimming pool, gymnasium, special health baths, a small hothouse and accommodations for dogs.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

Tuesday afternoon at the Pickaway county Teachers' institute Professor O. L. Warren, of the department of education of Mansfield state normal school, Mansfield Pennsylvania, finished his discourse on Apperception. He brought out many new ideas and his topic was interesting.

Professor Edwin Barlow Evans, dean and professor of English, Thiel College, Greenville, Pennsylvania, talked on an interesting subject; "How to Judge a Book."

The attendance Tuesday was very good, 119 teachers being present.

At the Wednesday morning session, Professor Evans made an address on the "Character of Macbeth" and Professor O. L. Warren talked on "Getting Into the Row."

AMUSEMENTS

"The Fog" which comes to the Met theater on Wednesday is one of the outstanding productions of the year, according to advance reports received here. This Metro picture combines every element which goes into the making of a screen masterpiece. The story by William Dudley Pelley, is chock full of thrills, pathos and beautiful romance.

And the absorbing story is made to live on the screen by one of the most distinguished groups of players ever assembled for one picture. The cast includes Mildred Harris, Louise Dresser, Ethel Wales, Louise Fazenda, Cullen Landis, Ralph Lewis, David Butler, Marjorie Prevost, Ann May, Frank Currier and Edward Phillips.

The story is based on the struggles of a boy and a girl to pierce the fog of tyranny and misunderstanding which enveloped them. And their final triumph, after many adventures and disillusionments, is brought about thru their love for each other.

The story was adapted by H. H. Van Loan. The scenario was prepared by Winifred Dunn. The photoplay was directed by Paul Powell under the personal supervision of Max Graf, and photographed by John R. Arnold.

CENTENARY.

Mrs. H. Rose Dresbach of Halls-ville, and daughter, Mrs. J. E. Rowlands, of Columbus, left Wednesday for Paris, Illinois, where Edgar county is celebrating its 100th anniversary with a grand homecoming, this being the birthplace and former home of Mrs. Dresbach. While there they will attend the annual reunion of the families of Dow, David and O'Neal Morris.

IMMIGRANT SHIP

Brings Many People to Our Shores Seeking Happiness and Prosperity.

The chauffeurs of the taxis, the paper boys, even the little shiner of his box seemed to be known to me. I wondered where I had seen those faces before, this being my first visit to the United States. Then suddenly came into my mind that I had seen them all on board the immigrant steamer.

They had all been: Isaac, Benjamin, Isahel, Rosenthal, and the rest of them, all coming from different places in Russia and the provinces of that country. All of them had come to the United States to seek a better life. They had not found in the old world a living and a life in happiness. The United States had more than one hundred millions of inhabitants, but on board that steamer was the material of at least four hundred new ones, and in New York I am sure I found hundreds of thousands of the same type. The sight of that crowd on board the steamer could not help but make one think of how life would be to them when they came ashore. They were all uneducated, could hardly read and write, all insufficiently dressed, undernourished and probably unable to work hard on account of their weak bodies. Yet all would have to earn a living, the not knowing one word of the American language.

Maybe they are all happy now, just as happy as the rest of their race in the states. But are they Americans? Or will they ever be Americans? That is the question I have put to myself as Americans to the very backbone. Most of these have denied it, yet facts seem to answer in the affirmative. If they will ever be Americans the States must indeed be a wonderful melting pot, superior to the rest of the nations. If they can teach people of so many nationalities and languages to be of one mind and soul, they have achieved more than any nation in the world ever did. It is remarkable to see how people, forever squabbling in Europe, when immigrating to the States seem to cooperate as good citizens. Irishmen work together with Englishmen, Germans with French and Austrians with Czechoslovaks. Maybe they do not cooperate very intimately; they are, anyhow, less antagonistic than when at home.—From "The Typical American" by Sven V. Knudsen, in the September Scribner's.

The Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"O, well," said Kelly, "I guess it will all come right if I just wait. I am a good waiter."

"The only place in this world for a good waiter," said the Hotel Stenographer, "is the dining room. People who just drift are like things that drift. They finish on a sand bank some place where they don't do themselves or any one else any good. If you go down to the river, Kelly, you will see a lot of things drifting down stream but you will never see anything drifting up stream. Everything that is going up stream has power behind it."

"I went to school with three girls. One of them had a natural gift for dancing, one a natural gift for singing and the third had no gift for either. The girl with the natural gift for dancing is the mother of six in the sixth floor walk-up apartment over on Heniken street, the one with the natural gift for singing is the old maid head of a washboard department in the Boston house and the girl who had no gift is playing a vaudeville circuit with a singing and dancing act that brings her in four hundred real dollars every Saturday night."

"The first two drifted like you are going. The other sang till her throat was raw and danced till she wore a couple of inches off the lower end of her legs. I went with the two who were here to see her at the theater the other night and they both sighed and said she had all the luck in the world."

"Kelly, no rabbit's foot, no four-leafed clover, no lucky penny, no horseshoe, no graveyard sand ever brought anybody any luck who was not willing to get behind that luck and shove like a flivverite stuck in a mud hole."

"There is a lot of room at the top for everybody. Most of it is made by people who went to sleep there and rolled off but every one of them had to work to get there, they didn't drift."

Shirkers in Abraham's Day.

There were always some people in the world who shirked their work. Far back in the days when Ur of the Chaldees where Abraham lived was a fine city they had them. Perhaps because there were so many of them the Father of the Faithful got up and left. Not long ago men were digging in the ruins of the old city, one of them tells us, searching for the foundation deposits of a temple. The diggers came across a small box containing a statuette of the ancient king carrying the first basket of earth from the site, and underneath that he found a beautifully polished but perfectly blank marble tablet. Upon this should have been the history of the building, but he could only assume that the scribe had drawn pay for work he never performed. Probably no one ever knew of the rascality until the English explorers discovered it.

Lightning Worth 1.2 Cents a Bolt.

Lightning, symbol of power since time immemorial, is worth just 1.2 cents per bolt, engineers of the General Electric company in Schenectady, N. Y., estimate. The voltage, or electrical pressure, of a stroke of lightning is 50,000,000 volts, they figure. But as "fast as lightning" is no idle phrase, they claim, and a flash is so soon over with that the energy involved is exceedingly small. One thousandth part of a second is the time which a flash usually lasts. If the assumed current of the flash, 1,000 amperes, is multiplied by the number of volts, they explain, a power of 50,000,000 kilowatts is obtained. In one second the energy produced is therefore only 500 kilowatts. At the rate of eight cents per kilowatt hour charged in this city, the value of one of these discharges of Nature's heavy artillery would be only 1.2 cents.

The Useful Thumb Tack.

Unless the lower hem of a window shade is rather close-fitting, the flat piece of wood run in to hold it even will often work itself out at one end, for several inches. This is especially apt to happen if the shade does not hang precisely straight. A small, flat-topped thumb tack, such as draftsmen use, at one corner, on the window side, will hold the wood firmly and not be visible from outside. Thumb tacks are invaluable also for holding firmly in place either paper or cloth used for lining the bottoms of drawers. Being flat, nothing can catch in them. Stores that sell them usually keep, also, a little instrument made for lifting them, saving the breaking of fingernails or knife blade.

Cuba's Fresh-Water Fish.

The fresh waters of Cuba are inhabited by fishes unlike those found in the fresh waters in the United States. Some of these are evidently indigenous, derived in the waters they now inhabit directly from marine forms. Two of these are eyeless species, inhabiting streams in caverns. They have no relatives in the fresh waters of any other region, the blind fishes in American caves being of a wholly different type. Some of the Cuban fishes are common to the fresh waters of the other West Indies. Of northern types, only one, the alligator gar, is found in Cuba, and this is evidently a filibuster immigrant from the coast of Florida.

Second Elijah.

In south India cholera had been raging through a village, but every man and woman who could walk had come to watch the drunken devil priest tear the living sacrifice to death with his teeth. Then, dipping his long whip in the warm blood of the dying goat, he danced round in a frenzy, beating the crowd and assuring them that he was driving the cholera goddess away from the village. The little Christian community gathered to pray. Suddenly the word came that the chief priest himself was down with cholera, and he sent to beg the white evangelist to come and save him. He went, and to the general amazement the man was saved.

Apologized for the Fish.

Politeness has developed among the Orientals to a degree of extravagance that is intensely amusing to visitors, oftentimes to the people themselves, as was the case when the popular Prince Kuni of Japan was fishing at Ritsurin Koen and twice lost a big fish from his line and the governor of the province appeared and made profuse apologies for the unfriendly and inconsiderate behavior of the fish.—Ohio State Journal.

Useless Effort.

Joan was to have a birthday party. She was anxious to conduct herself correctly, and was plying her mother with questions. "Well, dear," said her mother in answer to one concerning the advisability of saying grace before the meal, "for such an informal little party I hardly think you need say grace." Accordingly, when all the guests were seated, Joan, from the head of the table, announced, solemnly: "Mother says this is such an informal little party we need not say grace."—Kansas City Star.

Farmer's Assistants.

The bluebird has been proved by examination to be of great assistance to the farmer in combating insect pests. Sixty-eight per cent of its food is made up of bugs, etc., and what little vegetable matter it consumes is of the most harmless kind. The robin is an omnivorous feeder, and though injuring cultivated fruit to some extent, renders a distinctly useful purpose about the farm with its large consumption of worms and insects.

HOW TOWN GOT PECULIAR NAME

Peculiar, Mo., Unconsciously Christened by Peeved Post-office Department Official.

Washington.—There is a very peculiar story connected with the naming of Peculiar, Mo.—which is also a peculiar name for a town.

The federal government does not name towns and hamlets when they are born or feel the urge for a cognomen, but the Post Office department does regulate them to the extent of prohibiting duplicating of names within the same state. So when a newly-formed community in Missouri suggested a certain name for its post office, the department informed the inhabitants there was already one by that name in their state.

Several other names were chosen by the residents and submitted, but always with the same result. Finally an exasperated official of the department, in refusing the latest choice, wrote the city fathers among other things, "that it was mighty peculiar they could not find a good name for their town."

Whereupon he received the following reply: "Acting on your suggestion, we select the name Peculiar." And so Peculiar is on the map of today.

Rule in Naming New Towns.

There is only one rule in the naming of new towns, and that is that there shall be but one of the same name in a state. But that does not prohibit other states from boasting towns of the same name. For instance, there are 45 names used more than 20 times each to designate towns and cities.

Benjamin Franklin is remembered as an inspiration more than any other person, and Franklin as a town name takes the prize, occurring 31 times in 31 states.

The others in point of popularity run: Clinton, 30 times; Chester and Arlington, 29 of each; Washington, 28; Troy, Salem, Madison, Marion, Manchester and Clayton, 27; Glenwood, Kingston and Newport, 26; Ashland, Centerville and Cleveland, 25; Auburn, Dover, Hillsboro, Lincoln, Monroe, Oxford, Princeton, Springfield, Warren and Union, 24; Greenville and Wilson, 23; Belmont, Buffalo, Canton, Dayton, Eureka, Liberty, Milford and Plymouth, 22; Burlington and Lebanon, 21; Portland, Lexington, Jamestown, Hudson and Danville, 20.

Bane of Postoffice Clerks.

Duplicated names are the bane of the postal clerk, and the Yankee reputation for originality rises staggering when confronted by the apparent lack of imagination used to name American communities. There are even two Chicagos, six Philadelphias, seven Detroits and 14 Denvers.

Similarity in names also causes the postal department considerable trouble. Indistinct penmanship might easily confuse Eldora, Iowa, with Eldorado, Iowa. In Pennsylvania alone there are 13 communities whose names begin with the prefix Green: Greentown, Greenbriar, Greentown, Greentown, Green Land, Greenoch, Greentown, Greenboro, Greensburg, Greentown, Greentown, Greenville and Greentown.

There is a partiality for Bloom as a prefix in New York state, as, for example, Bloomingburg, Bloomingdale, Blooming Grove, Bloomington and Bloomingville.

Foreign cities have contributed their names freely in this country. There are 18 towns known as Paris and a like number of Genevas, 17 Berlins, despite the war, 12 Moscovs, 11 Viennas, six Pekins and two Brussels.

Master Printers Open International Bureau

Gothenburg, Sweden.—The establishment of an international bureau of master printers in Sweden is one of the results of the world congress of master printers which has just ended in Gothenburg. This meeting of expert printers was attended by 150 delegates from eighteen countries, including the United States, England, France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Sweden, Denmark and Norway.

It was set forth that a central bureau was needed in order to collect and distribute information regarding industrial disputes and settlement, means of combating unemployment, new methods of cost accounting, development of standardization of paper, presses, etc., the establishment of unit prices, and similar topics of general interest to the trade. The meeting passed a resolution that the Swedish Association of Master Printers be invited to open such a central bureau.

A bulletin will be issued in English, French and German, and the financial support of the central bureau will come from the various national bodies of printers who avail themselves of its service.

Austrians Moving to Berlin.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mr. and Mrs. John Neuding most delightfully entertained to a 6 o'clock dinner Tuesday evening honoring Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pugh on their return home from a wedding trip north. The dining room was most attractive in its decorations of pink and white. Hanging from the chandeliers was a big bell of pink and white with white streamers running to the four corners of the table with pink rosettes and in the center of the table was a big pink and white wedding cake which was cut by the bride, Mrs. Pugh. In the cake was found a thimble, button, ring and a coin. Miss Riebel being successful in finding the ring and Master Charles Kirkpatrick the coin. Seated at the bride's table were Mr. and Mrs. Pugh, Rev. Riebel, Miss Lutie Riebel, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Kirkpatrick and daughter, Mary Ellen and son, Charles William, Miss Josephine Pugh, Mrs. A. H. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. John Neuding and little daughter, Rosemary. Mrs. Neuding was assisted by Mrs. Kirkpatrick and Mrs. A. H. Morris, of Columbus.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Gildersleeve and daughters, Marcella and Roselyn Maude, and son, Paul, and Mrs. Maude Snyder motored to Chillicothe and Waverly Tuesday of last week and on returning in the evening picnicked at beautiful Elm Grove, 12 miles below Chillicothe.

Tuesday morning at 7:30 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, Rev. Father Hannan officiating, was solemnized the marriage of Miss Iona Wright, daughter of Mrs. Mary Wright, of Pherson, and Mr. William F. Shelton, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Shelton, of Grove City, formerly of this county. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Shook of Grove City, sister and brother-in-law of the groom. The bride was attired in a gray Canton crepe dress with hat to match. The bridesmaid was attired in a blue Canton crepe dress with hat to match. Immediately after the wedding the guests were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Howell, 525 Elm avenue, to a wedding breakfast. The happy couple then departed on a motor trip to relatives and friends in the east. On their return they will make their future home in Columbus where the groom has a clerical position with the Capital City Packing company.

Little Dorothy Glick, of Shady Place, will entertain forty of her little friends to a garden party Thursday, August 23, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Stanley Glick.

Mrs. John W. Myers, of Williamsport, entertained today in honor of Miss Esther Hornbeck, of Marengo, Illinois. A number of guests were present from this city.

Mrs. A. M. Wiegand will entertain to bridge Thursday in honor of her niece, Mrs. James Cheek of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and Mrs. Ralph R. Upton, of Seattle, Washington.

Miss Grace Clarke entertains to cards this afternoon.

Mrs. W. J. Weaver will entertain to a dinner party Friday in honor of Mrs. Ralph R. Upton of Seattle, Washington.

About 76 gathered at the home of Carl Boch, of Pherson, to attend the reunion of the McPherson family. A splendid dinner was served on the lawn and was enjoyed by everyone.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank our neighbors and friends for their kindness and sympathy during our recent bereavement.

Mr. and Mrs. Eli Beesby
Mr. and Mrs. Harvey McCrum
Mrs. Minnie Windom

INCORPORATION

James J. Hinde Preparing for Organization of Paper Box Company.

James J. Hinde was in Columbus Tuesday in conference with the secretary of state concerning the incorporation of the Hinde Paper Box company. The Ohio Blue laws in regard to the sale of stock are being rigidly enforced at this time. The set up as planned by Messrs. Hinde & Sons conforms entirely with the requirements of the secretary of state and also the department of commerce, division of securities of whom they have the hearty cooperation.

Ohio state laws are now looked upon as giving better protection to the investor than do the laws of many other states.

MOVED TO CIRCLEVILLE.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark Hunsicker and daughter, Margaret, have moved from Woodlyn to the Walling homestead on West Union street, this city. They recently purchased this property and have made extensive improvements and have converted it into a thoroughly modern home.

MRS. SIMMONS DEAD.

Mrs. Elizabeth Simmons died at St. Francis hospital, Columbus, Saturday, August 17, the result of a broken hip. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Dumm, who lived for many years at South Bloomfield. Burial was in Green Lawn cemetery by the side of her husband, who preceded her a year ago last March. She leaves one brother, William Dumm, of Columbus.

Architecture Reflects History.

Like most Alsatian towns, Metz reflects its Franco-Prussian history in its architecture. Part of the fortifications were begun by the French and finished by the Germans. The Roman Catholic cathedral looks down over the Lutheran church. And the city gates, of which there are ten, are doubly named, Porte d'Allemagne or Deutsche tor, and so on.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE.

The 241 acre home farm of J. E. Renick will be sold on the premises next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. This is one of the best farms in Ohio and has all new, modern equipment. Appraised at $225 an acre. 22augd4w1.

Reduce Your Production Costs

Farming, like every other business, must cut down the overhead.

It is not a question of being able to afford a Fordson; it is a question of being able to continue farming on the old too-costly basis.

The farmer's problem is not all a sales problem; it is also a production problem. He must cut down the cost of production.

The Fordson does more work at a lower cost and in less time than the old hand methods.

Let us give you the proof. Write, phone or call today.

THE BERRY PATCH
By FANNY RICHARDSON

THE age of eighteen one should be blissfully happy, even in a stuffy train—especially when one is the proud possessor of two boxes of chocolates, roses and four magazines. But Isabell's usually smiling mouth was puckered into an unhappy little twist. The ticket she had put in her glove read "Lesterville," where, isolated from suitors, theaters, dances and good times, she was expected to spend an eventful vacation away from the city with her aunt, who was to strictly see to it that she did nothing else but eat good food, fresh from the farm, and rest.

Perfectly ridiculous, wasn't it, that such an attractive girl as Isabell, with absolutely nothing the matter with her, should be made to spend her vacation in such a place? Her aunt had said there were no young people in the neighborhood. Isabell laughed as she recollected. Who even heard of a neighborhood without young people?

However, her aunt was true to her word. After Isabell had stayed four days in Lesterville she had not seen anyone her own age except the tawny-haired, freckle-faced farmhand, Isabell, craving companionship, thought the boy "better than nothing," and they spent many a half-hour together.

When Isabell had been a week in Lesterville she heard there was going to be a costume party in the village. Her freckle-faced friend told her of it. She began making plans for it, having made up her mind she was going.

Arriving conspicuously late at the party, there was nothing for them to do but watch the games which were in progress on lantern-bedecked lawns. A young man dressed as Captain Kidd, evidently their host, offered Isabell his place in a game of croquet. "But I don't know how," she had objected. Tom, at their host's suggestion, eagerly took his mallet and joined in the game.

"I'm sorry you don't play," said the host, "but there are six or seven other games you could join. They're dancing the Virginia Reel in the barn. Come, let's do that."

Smiling, Isabell took his arm. "It's quite a while since I've done it, but I'll try."

And a few moments later Isabell was "doing it." She little knew what a gay picture she made in her Egyptian costume, dancing in and out, clapping and bowing to her unknown escort, whose fiercely grotesque costume seemed to enhance the beauty of his little partner's outfit.

"Let's play 'It,'" said Captain Kidd, after the dancing was over.

Then followed a period of explanations. In spite of the fact that Isabell knew very few of the games, she found her host more than eager to explain. He took her to this group and that group, introduced her, but never once let any of the other men be her partner.

Somebody tugged at her dress. It was Tom. "Hurry, we got to go now, or we'll get caught. The thing's 'most over!"

Dismayed, Isabell looked at her sandalless foot. "I can't, Tom, until he finds my sandal."

"We can't wait," he said. "Come with me now—easy, this way—so they won't notice."

It was ten o'clock, the day after the party. Isabell was getting ready to go blueberrying. In a sunbonnet, hardly to be recognized as the dazzling Egyptian princess of the night before, yet certainly as desirable, she was soon walking in a thicket of berry bushes. From time to time she wondered how she had been able, as she recalled last night's experiences, to get home ahead of her aunt, hustle under the bed-clothes still in her costume, and wear the innocent expression she had worn when her aunt had opened her door to see if all was well.

For an hour Isabell picked, humming snatches of a gay little tune. Then there had been a slight rustling in the bushes, a scream from Isabell, and the berries had been scattered in a hundred directions. Then she had run and run. A young man was coming toward her. Instinctively he held out his arms and she ran right into them.

Absurd, isn't it, to try and work against fate? How hard Isabell's aunt had worked to keep her niece away from parties and excitement. And she had only to send her niece out to a blueberry patch where there wasn't supposed to be a soul around for miles, and a young man dropped right out of the clouds at her feet.

It was Captain Kidd who carried Isabell back to the road. He took a long time about it, going around a longer way than necessary. "You say you only saw his horns?" he asked.

"Yes. But I don't think I'll ever be able to go berrying again."

He looked down at the pale face. "He wouldn't hurt you. He probably ran faster than you did."

"When we get to the road, I'm going to give you your slipper."

"You have my slipper!" she cried.

"Why, it's just like the Cinderella fairy tale, isn't it?"

"My, but we're taking a long time getting to the road. Why, you've taken me around the longest way. Naughty prince! Just for that, I'm going to make you carry me right up to the house. Auntie will have a fit!"

And auntie did have a fit, but she might just as well have saved her strength.

If friends should come for the night, would you have adequate sleeping room for them? Or would someone be forced to get as much rest as possible from some uncomfortable makeshift? With just enough sleeping rooms for the family, there comes the embarrassment of asking someone to sleep on something never intended to be used as a bed.

A Northfield will relieve you of any such emergency. Beneath the soft, low seat is a full-size, restful bed—perfectly concealed. You will never be aware of its presence until the need for it arises.

A large variety of Overstuffed, Fibre Reed and Period designs are available. You can select single pieces or suites that will harmonize with the rest of your furniture. We will be glad to assist you in making a choice.

Daddy's Evening
Fairy Tale
MARY GRAHAM BONNER
COPYRIGHT BY THE CIRCLEVILLE DAILY UNION-HERALD

CHATS WITH BROWNIE
Billie Brownie had had a number
of interesting chats with many animals and birds of late, and they had told him a good deal about themselves.
"Of course," Billie Brownie said
to himself, "I can see that the animals are all nice to look at, and that they have most wonderful ways, but I wonder if they wouldn't tell me more if I went about to visit them."
So Billie Brownie had gone and
he had seen many of the animals and
birds, as I've said, and he was planning to tell the Brownies about these chats.
"You see," Billie Brownie said,
when all the Brownies were gathered together, "I knew that so many of the birds and animals were of the same colors as the places where they made their homes and that they were thus so
as to be safe and not seen."
"I knew that they had costumes
which were of a great deal of protection to them."
"But I wanted to hear more, so I talked to a good many. There had been some kind of an exhibition of animals and of their fine ways, and I thought perhaps the different creatures
would tell me something of it."
"There were lectures about the animals, too. Perhaps they would tell me of these, also, I thought."
"And they told me a great deal.
Yes, I have had some interesting chats
of late."
"I talked to His Grace, the Swan.
He told me that they had partially
webbed feet, which were of a great deal of help to them in swimming."
The Pelican told me that their feet
were webbed and their toes jointed
together for this very reason.
"The Penguin told me that their wings made useful paddles, when they were going about travelling."
"I talked to a fine sea turtle who told me that he had front arms (or
he said I could call them something else if I thought of a better name for
them) which were very useful to him
in swimming."
"These had bones which were flat
and which were covered by skin and
which served as the finest kind of paddles and were wonderfully fine
when he wanted to swim as he had
told me."
"Solid and flat bones made nice
paddles he explained!"
"I had a chat with the sea-otter who told me that his bird feet helped him to jump when he was on land, for he
said:
"As you can guess by my name, I am not much on the land, but I am a very fine swimmer."
"A very fine swimmer, indeed!"
"Old Mr. Beaver was one of the most interesting I met."
"He said: 'Billie Brownie, I am glad to tell you anything you want to know. It is summer time now and I am off on a holiday, visiting my friends and so forth."
"It is not working time. What is
it you would like to have me tell you?"
"Something of yourself," I asked
him. "I have been hearing of how useful various animals and other creatures found their legs and arms and
be useful."
"I have thought it was wonderful
the way they all were of such assistance—like useful tools or like having private automobiles to help them about."
"Mr. Beaver laughed.
"Well, if those
are the things
you've been finding out I'm a good
one to come to for
I have two kinds
of limbs."
"My front ones
are splendid for taking hold of things and for getting me about,
while my back
ones are splendid
for swimming."
"You see, my toes are longer and
stronger in my back legs than in my front ones and they are covered with skin which makes them a wonderful
help to me when I swim—but not much when I walk. It is because of them that I'm not so very graceful
on my feet."
"But no matter. One can't have everything."
"Such were the chats I had on my last trip," Billie Brownie ended.

DANCE EDICT

Kalamazoo Folk Must Watch Their Step—Stringent Regulations.

Kalamazoo dancing clubs and fraternal organizations were split wide open by a proposed amendment which would make the city's drastic dancing ordinance still more stringent.

The proposal offered by the chief of police and the policewomen was passed at first reading after a lengthy debate Monday night and will come up for final consideration Monday, September 3. The fox trot, pivot turn, doffing of men's coats, and waist line contact were the principal objects of attack in the proposed amendment, which would prohibit "soul gazing" by partners into one another's eyes for a considerable time.

The ordinance requires dancers to look over one another's right shoulders. It was explained that this provision was decided on for "sanitary reasons," so as to prevent partners from breathing into one another's faces.

Among the other practices that would be barred are suggestive steps or motions placing the lady's arm around her partner's neck, any contact between the gentleman's left hand and the body of either; fast running steps of more than two to a measure unless taken intermittently; a backward poise of the body, resulting in waist line contact between partners, instead of a forward poise, bringing contact at the chests.

HARTMAN THEATER

Monday—Al G. Field minstrels—State fair week.

The day is a happy one for all Ohio in that it ushers in the new Field production and Ohio's great state fair two events which have come to be synchronous and synonymous in the minds of all state fair visitors. The Field show again inaugurates the new theatrical season at the Hartman, a custom it has enjoyed for many years and always the week of the big fair.

Those who expect to visit the Field entertainment during their stay in Columbus are urged to make reservations at the earliest possible opportunity, as delay may mean disappointment in obtaining seats.

Edward Conard and Joseph E. Hatfield, joint owners and producers of the Al G. Field minstrels, have achieved the greatest success of the 37 splendid years that are to the credit of the organization this year. It is heralded as the very finest and most lavish, as well as ambitious show black face minstrelsy has yet attained. Previous critics are unanimous in acclaiming its unusual merit and Hartman patrons will know what to expect in view of the splendid performances given by this popular American organization in the past.

The company again includes all the old familiar and much loved faces and some new ones as well and the production is a brilliant one in every sense of the word. Manager Conard has outdone all former efforts in staging the show and it is without a doubt the most expensive minstrelsy ever known.

The company includes Jack Richards, Billy Church, Nick Hufford, Roddy Jordan, John Heely, Ed. Jones, Pete Detzel, Boni Mack, Harry Frillman, Ola Ellwood, Leslie Berry, Dolt Kastor, the Doran Brothers, Lloyd Gilbert, Carl Cameron's saxoland five and all the other familiar and popular names of the old program.

Matinee Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Woman Attacked.

Sylvan Beach, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Mrs. T. W. Edgar, wife of a New York physician noted for rejuvenation operations, is nursing a swollen jaw in Cavena hospital, and William Russell, proprietor of a hotel at which she was a guest, is out on bail, as a result of having struck her, it is said. Mrs. M. E. Lamphrey, mother of Mrs. Edgar, said the trouble started when Mrs. Edgar criticised the food at Russell's hotel. Then followed a dispute and Mrs. Edgar was ordered out.

MOVED TO CITY.

Rev. M. R. White and family, of Jackson, have moved back to this city and will occupy the residence on East Franklin street which he recently purchased from the heirs of J. P. Blacker.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE.

The 241 acre home farm of J. E. Renick will be sold on the premises next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. This is one of the best farms in Ohio and has all new, modern equipment. Appraised at $225 an acre. 22augd4w1.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

PROVES AMERICA ONCE JOINED ASIA

Asiatic Expedition Establishes Existence of Land Connection —Discovers Fossil Field.

Washington.—In a report just received from Peking, Roy Chapman Andrews, leader of the Third Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History of New York, declares the existence of a land connection between Asia and North America has unquestionably been established and hundreds of years of work will be required to exhaust the huge deposits in "one of the world's greatest fossil fields."

Beyond Their Hopes.

Mr. Andrews' letter says: "The first month of the expedition's work is far beyond our hopes. Where we expected only fragments we have discovered an immense deposit of large and small dinosaur bones. It will require many months to exhaust this region, but we have removed two partially complete skeletons and parts of several others. This includes herbivorous dinosaurs, 30 feet long, of the iguanodon type and smaller carnivorous species. These bones are at least 5,000,000 years old, but beautifully preserved.

"They probably are related to European types, and with our former work indicate that Central Asia is the ancestral home of the dinosaurs which migrated to Europe and America.

"We have discovered a skull of a giant rhinoceros—like the beast known as the titanotheres—which, although it has been buried for 3,000,000 years, is almost as perfect as though the animal had died a week ago. The titanotheres were previously only known in America.

Deposits Full of Interest.

"We have found also remains of a giant dog-like carnivore, as well as many teeth and jaws of an ancestral tapir-like animal. We could spend easily a year's time in these great deposits, but will give them only enough time to get a few of the choicest things.

"The expedition's belief that Mongolia is one of the world's greatest fossil fields is thoroughly confirmed. It will require a hundred years of work by many expeditions to exhaust these huge deposits.

"Our original theory of a Central Asian center of dispersal of the mammalian life of Europe and America is receiving more proof every day. The existence of a land connection between Asia and North America has unquestionably been established.

"The expedition will proceed westward into the Central Gobi desert. We expect to investigate areas which we located last summer and to explore new regions south of the Altai mountains toward Chinese Turkestan and far to the west."

British Lead in Ships That Pass Suez Canal

London.—The number of ships and their net tonnage that passed through the Suez canal in 1922 totaled 4,345 and 20,745,245 respectively. The receipts amounted to 166,856,537 francs (about $10,345,105 at the present rate of exchange).

The canal company's books for 1922, just balanced, show that vessels flying the British flag headed the list, numbering 2,736, or 63 per cent, with a gross tonnage of 18,425,942. The Dutch were next with 455 vessels, or 10.5 per cent, their gross tonnage being 2,984,013. Third on the numerical list is Italy with 225 vessels, equal to 5.2 per cent, with a gross tonnage of 1,189,359, but France, with 215 vessels, or 4.9 per cent, has the higher gross tonnage of 1,466,121. The German flag was borne by 149 vessels, or 3.4 per cent, with a gross tonnage of 1,031,424.

Japanese Skipper Is Found Dead at Wheel

San Diego, Cal.—Steering erratically in a circle twenty-five miles off the harbor here, and, failing to answer hails from other craft, the Japanese fishing boat Fuso was overhauled by another Japanese boat and the skipper, O. Tomann, found dead.

Tomann, the only person aboard, was found lashed to the wheel, his body leaning to one side, which caused the Fuso to steer about in a circle, as the gasoline engine of the boat was operating full power.

Physicians declared death was due to heart trouble.

Secret Drawers Yield $7,335 in Old Bureau

Manchester, England.—A combined Sheraton bureau and bookcase, which was bought from a dealer recently by the wife of a Manchester corporation official for $100, has yielded up from secret drawers several bonds and probate of a will relating to property of the value of $7,335.

The dealer had indicated the location of two secret drawers, but investigation by the purchaser brought to light three more secret recesses.

The will is dated November, 1906, and is drawn up by Mrs. Sarah Kershaw, No. 15 Meadow street, Moss Side, Manchester. A Manchester corporation bond for $100, redeemable next month, and a Stockport corporation bond for $500 was discovered.

"The Store That Treats You Right"

OF COURSE, if you can afford to buy "cheap clothes" we haven't a word to say, but thrifty men find them too expensive.

The difference in cost between good and poor clothing is not great, but the difference in satisfaction and service is amazing.

"CLUB CLOTHES"

Suits and Overcoats at $25, $30 and $35 that are exceedingly attractive.
